Paris Offers Plan to End Anglo-Soviet Deadlock

Halifax to Confer With Daladier; Triple Alliance May Be Considered

New French Plan

By William Hillman,
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

London, May 15.—British Foreign Secretary Viscount Halifax, it was learned late tonight, will fly to Paris on Saturday to discuss with Premier Daladier a new French plan reported to provide for a triangular mutual assistance pact among Britain, France and Soviet Russia.

The French proposals, it was reliably understood, already have been submitted to the British and Soviet governments as a suggested method of breaking the deadlock in the Anglo-Russian negotiations to bring the U. S. S. R. into the anti-aggression lineup.

The French scheme was understood to have been evolved tonight after the Soviet Union in a note to Britain rejected as inadequate the British proposals for an indirect, flexible security system in eastern Europe, insisted on reciprocal military guarantees to protect Russia's western frontiers, but left the door open to further discussions.

French Plan an Alternative

Word reaching London was to the effect that it was hoped in Paris the French proposals, framed into textual form, might serve as the basis for a final agreement, provided that it is no longer possible to base an agreement on the British plan for Soviet pledges to aid Poland and Rumania against aggression.

[An Associated Press dispatch from Paris said the French government was preparing to take the role of "honest broker" in Anglo-Soviet negotiations.—Editor's note.]

Halifax will spend next week-end in conference with Daladier and French Foreign Minister Bonnet before he and Bonnet proceed to Geneva for the opening of the League of Nations Council session Monday, at which time they will begin discussions with the Soviet vice commissar for foreign affairs, Vladimir Potemkin.

The salient feature of the Soviet note, a copy of which was communicated to Paris, was authoritatively understood to be insistence on full reciprocity among Britain, France and the U. S. S. R.

Compromise Expected

The Soviet note, it was reliably learned, spoke of Moscow's awareness of a danger that Russian territory might be attacked through the Baltic area in the north or the Ukraine in the south. But, while persisting in its refusal to accept the British plan, Russia nevertheless left the door open for further negotiations.

Now that the positions of both Britain and Russia on the entire question have been clarified in detail, the protracted bargaining

U. S. Cruiser To Search for Missing Author

Secretary of the Navy Swanson yesterday ordered the cruiser Astoria, which recently carried the ashes of the late Ambassador Hirosi Saito to his native Japan, to search for Richard Halliburton, author-adventurer last heard from 370 miles north of Marcus Island in the Pacific several weeks ago.

The order was issued after Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of naval operations, conferred with Senator McKellar (Democrat), of Tennessee, and Wesley Halliburton, Memphis, Tenn., insurance man, father of the missing writer.

Arab Rule Said To Be British Palestine Plan

Expected to Provide Restrictions to Keep Jews in a Minority

By the Associated Press.

London, May 15.—Great Britain was said by a reliable source tonight to have decided to free herself in 1944 from any obligation to facilitate a Jewish national home in Palestine by further Jewish immigration.

This source said the decision would be announced in the White Paper on Palestine which Prime Minister Chamberlain said today would be issued at 7 p. m. Wednesday (1 p. m., E. S. T.).

The informant said the new policy would be designed to take effect five years from date of publication of the White Paper.

With immigration as the keystone of the new policy, the government was said to be proposing establishment within a decade of a new independent state in which the radio of Jews to Arabs never would exceed 40 to 60.

During the first five years the British government will allow 50,000 Jewish immigrants, with an

Snite, in Iron Lung, Here on Way to Miracle Shrine

Fred Snite, jr., infantile paralysis victim kept alive in an iron lung for three years, passed through Washington yesterday on the way to the Shrine of Our Lady of Lourdes, France.

As his train stopped here a few minutes, Snite grinned cheerfully from his steel prison. His father declined to say whether he expected a miracle for his son at the famous shrine.

He declared, merely, that no one can make the pilgrimage without benefiting spiritually, and added that the real miracle was performed when Fred was stricken in preserving his life when doctors declared it impossible.

A.M.A. Studies Opening Doors To Colored

Also May Admit Woman Physician To Ruling Council

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, May 15.—American Medical Association delegates today proposed to seat a woman physician in its governing council and to let down bars to A. M. A. membership among the Nation's 5,000 colored doctors.

Both moves would break precedents. Both are in preparation for a battle over how to spend wisely the tax money for medical care of the poor which the A. M. A. has indorsed in principle.

Skinning Machine

The doctors' ideas of alleged waste, extravagance and political dangers in present Congressional plans for socialized medicine, as stated in the Wagner bill now in the Senate, were detailed in two resolutions, from Iowa and Virginia.

After the resolutions had been presented, the House of Delegates, representing 112,000 American physicians, recessed to consider them. The House itself appointed a special committee to consider the Wagner act.

A new machine for skinning human beings to make skin grafting more certain and safe and thus save lives was demonstrated today.

In principle his machine is an electric razor which can cut any area of the skin to any desired depth accurately and quickly.

Heretofore skin grafting required that the surgeon have a flat surface of the body to work on when he removed a piece of skin with the

Schulte Offers Bill to Open D. C. Market to Western Milk

Chairman Bates, of the House sub-committee investigating the District milk supply, said yesterday he would ask the House for additional funds as Representative Schulte (Democrat), of Indiana, introduced a bill to open the Washington milk market to Western producers.

Pointing out that the original $2,500 is running low and that several weeks of additional testimony are in prospect, Bates said that $2,500 is needed but that he may be forced to accept $1,500 from the House Accounts Committee.

Schulte, a member of the sub-committee, proposed that milk and cream for fluid consumption be allowed to come into the District from any source whatsoever so long as the cattle are certified by an authorized veterinarian and have passed a tuberculin test. His bill seeks to amend the 1925 milk act.

Inspection of the cattle, the bill states, might be made by a Health Department inspector, an agent of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, or a veterinarian authorized by one or the other agency.

Cream admitted for ice cream manufacturing, the bill provides, would have to be kept at a temperature of not less than 50 degrees Fahrenheit, could contain no visible dirt adulteration or foreign substance, and not more than 50,000 bacteria.

Schulte's bill is the second proposal by a Westerner to break down

Royal Liner Steaming Up St. Lawrence

Canadian Destroyers Join Escort, Lead Spurt to Reach Quebec Tomorrow

By Edward T. Folliard
A Staff Correspondent.

Quebec, May 15.—The Empress of Australia, two days behind schedule, brought King George and Queen Elizabeth into Canadian waters today and tonight was steaming up the Gulf of St. Lawrence.

Led by the Canadian destroyers Skeena and Saguenay and flanked by the British cruisers Southampton and Glasgow, the vessel was scheduled to dock at Quebec Wednesday morning.

Early this morning the King and Queen were given their first New World welcome by two sparrows which alighted on the deck. A short time later the royal couple could see the snow mantled hills of Newfoundland.

Flying Boats in Salute

As the liner left fog and ice floe and sped toward the Canadian coast, three Royal Canadian air force flying boats roared overhead and dipped in salute.

Next to greet the monarchs were the Canadian warships which met Their Majesties' vessel in Cabot Strait, between Newfoundland and Cape Breton Island, Nova Scotia, late in the afternoon.

Crews of the Canadian destroyers stood to quarters and gave three cheers for His Majesty as King George watched from the bridge of the liner with the Queen at his side.

The liner and her convoy are expected to reach Gaspe, near the mouth of the St. Lawrence River, early tomorrow morning. Following a night halt at the Isle of Orleans, George and Elizabeth will disembark Wednesday morning at Wolfes Cove, Quebec, where the British landed 180 years ago to wrest Canada from France.

Time at Ottawa Cut

Although it was learned that the originally planned Canadian visit would be cut two and a half days to make up for time lost on the Atlantic crossing, full ceremonies were expected to be carried out here and in the other two French-Canadian cities, Three Rivers and Montreal. Instead, the itinerary will be cut during the visit to Ottawa, the Dominion capital, to avoid touching sensibilities of the French Canadians. Here in Quebec the spectacle of women practicing the curtsy in hotel rooms and lounges was a familiar one today.

Today also, the much-discussed snow birds, sparrow-sized delicacies that were to tickle the royal palates at an official luncheon at the Chateau Frontenac, went down the gullets of commoners instead. A distraught chef, who had planned to serve them today, was afraid to wait longer and so listed them on the daily menu.

One Crank Arrested

Hundreds of speckled trout, taken from an ice-covered lake, shared the fate of the snow birds.

Painter Indicted On Tale He Forced Auto-Train Crash

Douglas Goodnough, 27, painter, was indicted yesterday by a special grand jury in Fairfax County, Va., on charges of feloniously wounding Blair Cupp, 22, WPA worker, and obstructing a railroad and endangering the lives of passengers. He is charged with forcing Cupp to remain in an auto until a train narrowly missed hitting him.

State Senator John W. Rust, of Fairfax, Goodnough's attorney, asked that he be confined to a State institution for examination.

Judge Walter T. McCarthy, of the Circuit Court, directed Dr. Carson L. Fifer, of Alexandria, and Dr. A. Ray Dawson, of Arlington, to examine Goodnough Monday, "not to ascertain his mental condition as a sanity commission, but merely to advise the court."

Court Backs Impounding Of Stock Fees

Refuses to Return To Commission Men $600,000 Held Up By Wallace

By Robert C. Albright.

The Supreme Court yesterday refused, 5 to 3, to order release of $600,000 in impounded stockyard fees pending new determination by Secretary of Agriculture Wallace of the reasonableness of rates charged at the Kansas City yards.

A victory for Wallace in his extended legal battle with Kansas City commission men, the court reversed a lower court decision returning the funds to the stockyard handlers.

Net result may be that the money, or a large part of it, may ultimately go to the livestock raisers instead of to the commission men.

The disputed sum represents the difference between charges collected by the commission men from farmers selling cattle and rates prescribed by Wallace in 1933.

Wallace's original order was invalidated by the court last year for lack of full and fair hearings. The commission men immediately demanded return of the impounded money but Wallace in the meanwhile had opened new proceedings in line with the last court pronouncement.

"His (Wallace's), determination, if supported by evidence and made in a proceeding conducted in conformity with the statute and due process, will afford the appropriate basis for action in the district court in making distribution of the fund in its custody," ruled Justice Stone yesterday.

Three Justices Disagree

Three members of the court, Justices Butler, McReynolds and Roberts, thought otherwise. In a dissenting opinion, they held there is nothing to justify or excuse failure to return the money to the commission men.

"The challenged order having been adjudged invalid because made in violation of the act, the appellees immediately became entitled to the money," the court minority protested.

Justice Douglas, newest and youngest member of the Court, voted with Stone to defer distribution.

It was the only split decision of the day. Heading down the last lap toward summer recess, the Court disposed of half a dozen pending cases but failed to rule on some of the more important—Constitutionality of Federal milk marketing agreements, the status of the child labor amendment and Mayor Hague's alleged violation of civil rights in Jersey City.

Bergdoll Barred By Unanimous Vote of House

By the Associated Press.

By unanimous action, the House voted yesterday to keep Grover Cleveland Bergdoll, convicted World War draft dodger, out of the United States.

It sent to the Senate a bill to forbid re-entry to this country, either temporarily or permanently, of any individual who was convicted of desertion from the United States' armed forces during war time and who went to a foreign country to escape punishment.

A wealthy Philadelphian, Bergdoll was convicted of being a slacker, but fled to Germany shortly after the war. Members of his family announced recently that he planned to return to the United States to serve out his five-year sentence.

Potter Palmer Dies After Fight at Picnic

Meat-Cutter Admits Hitting Chicagoan Once, But Isn't Held

By the Associated Press.

Sarasota, Fla., May 15.—Potter D'Orsay Palmer died in a hospital here today shortly after Sheriff C. J. Hutches said Kenneth Nosworthy, a young meatcutter, had acknowledged striking the oft-married Chicago heir at a picnic last Thursday.

Palmer died at 5:30 p. m. from a cerebral hemorrhage which Dr. David Kennedy said was caused by a "terrific blow" on the head. He was brought to the hospital Saturday.

Hutches said Nosworthy came voluntarily to the sheriff's office in nearby Bradenton today and admitted striking the socially prominent Chicagoan "one time with my fist."

Assistant State Attorney W. M. Smiley reported Nosworthy claimed the blow was struck "after Palmer had taunted him all afternoon and struck at him with a bottle." Nosworthy said Palmer did not collapse after the blow and he did not realize until today his adversary had been badly hurt.

No charges were lodged against Nosworthy.

Palmer's fourth wife, a former waitress, was at the hospital throughout the day as were his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Honore Palmer.

House May Get Item Vote on Farm Boosts

Woodrum to Ask Bill Be Returned for Study By Appropriations Unit

The first move for a cut in the $1,218,0000,000 farm appropriation bill may be made in the House today, when economy bloc leaders protest any conference action until the House is assured of a separate vote on Senate increases.

The record-breaking bill, carrying a $225,000,000 addition for far parity payments and another unbudgeted $113,000,000 for sudplus removal was messaged from the Senate to the House yesterday but remained on the Speaker's desk.

Cannon Weighs Course

Representative Woodrum (Democrat) of Virginia reiterated last night he will object to the usually routine motion to send the bill to conference. He said he will ask Speaker Bankhead instead to refer the bill to the House Appropriations Committee for hearings on Senate increases.

Representative Cannon (Democrat), of Missouri, House manager of the bill, said he will confer this morning with members of his Appropriations sub-committee before determining a course of procedure.

Cannon, who favors the parity payment amendment written into the bill by the Senate, said normally the Speaker would be required by rules to send the bill back to the Appropriations Committee if an immediate conference is protested.

No Wheat Referendum

"But there are two other things I could do," said the Missourian. "I could move to suspend the rules and get a vote on sending the bill to conference. Or I could ask the Rules Committee to report out a special rule to send it to conference. I haven't determined what course I will follow."

Meantime, Secretary of Agriculture Wallace decided yesterday that estimated 1939 wheat supplies are not large enough to proclaim marketing quotas and to order a farmer

Farm Group Blocks Vote on Wages, Hours

House Is Denied Debate on Coverage For Agriculture

Strength of farm bloc demands for sweeping agricultural exemptions under the wage-hour law was indicated yesterday when Chairman Norton of the House Labor Committee, refused in a last-minute change of plans, to give the House opportunity to consider alterations of the act at the present time.

Intending to ask the House to take up committee amendments to the law under suspension of the rules, Mrs. Norton was faced yesterday with formidable opposition, partly engendered by week-end activity of five leading farm organizations, which had described the proposed changes as placing agriculture "in a straight-jacket." Suspension of the rules, requiring a two-thirds vote, would have limited debate and prevented further alteration of the Norton amendments, which were designed to exempt only certain classes of agricultural labor, as well as other groups of

Daughter, 50, Meets Father, 77, For First Time

Berlin, Md., May 15 (AP).—Seventy-seven-year old Fred Aydelotte met his daughter for the first time today, 50 years after he left his wife because of what he called "a minor argument."

Aydelotte disappeared from his home in nearby Snow Hill in 1889, two months before the daughter, now Mrs. R. C. Brittingham, was born. She located him in Bowling Green, Mo., recently, and invited him to return.

Aydelotte learned today that his wife had died in 1935. Thinking him dead, she remarried three times, outliving all three husbands.

Ranks Split, Harlan Operators Call Union Chief to Parley

By the Associated Press.

Harlan, Ky., May 15.—A definite break in the phalanx of Harlan operators opposing a new contract with John L. Lewis' United Mine Workers came tonight as more National Guard troops arrived to patrol additional mines expected to open tomorrow.

E. J. Asbury, superintendent of the Black Mountain Coal Corp., at Kenvir, one of the largest mines in the county, said he would open separate negotiations with the union tomorrow. The corporation normally employs about 600 men.

"You'll know when we sign," he said, adding that his company did not object to a union shop—the issue that caused representatives of the Harlan Coal Operators Association to walk out of the New York conference Saturday when 15 other districts approved.

The Black Mountain Corporation is not a member of the county association but observers said the large number of men returning to work without National Guard troops would weaken the position of other operators.

The first indication of "peace talk" was when George S. Ward, secretary of the operators' association, called the members to meet with William Turnblazer, of Jellico, Tenn., president of the Harlan U. M. W. district.

Other union representatives met with the operators for almost two hours.

Revisionists Launch New Drive as Tax Parley Fails

Conservatives Say They'll Force Move Despite Disapproval Of White House

By Felix Cotten.

Conservatives in Congress started a movement last night to force passage of tax legislation to aid business after President Roosevelt and Congressional leaders failed to agree in a two-hour conference on new corporation taxes to replace those expiring December 31.

The President, it is understood, was cool toward a corporation tax proposal suggested by Senator Harrison (Democrat), Mississippi, chairman of the Senate Finance Committee. The keystone of the tax plan is repeal of the existing remnant of the undistributed profits tax and substitution of a flat 18 per cent tax on net income of corporations in excess of $25,000 a year.

Senate Determined to Act

As a result, Senators and Representatives insisting on throwing a fillip to business by revamping the corporation tax structure were in a mood to take matters into their own hands. Notice was served on Administration leaders, it is understood, that if the House did not pass such legislation the Senate would.

Participants in the conference said Mr. Roosevelt took the position that, in any revision of the tax structure, care should be taken not to create new "loopholes." Pointing to the accumulation by corporations of large surpluses, he demanded that the undistributed profits tax be retained or a satisfactory substitute imposed to prevent tax avoidance by this means.

Lukewarm Toward Plan

Although the President did not close the door to revision of corporation taxes, it is said, he did not authorize the Treasury to present to Congress its suggestions for streamlining the corporation tax structure to remove business deterrents. The impression prevailed that he was lukewarm toward this plan.

Representative Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, said after the conference that it would be up to the committee to decide whether to call Treasury officials o submit plans for removing tax deterrents. He will lay the matter before the committee, he said, when it gets around to the tax question.

Hanes Plan Advanced

The tax plan advanced by Harrison, it is understood, is a modified form of a program worked out by John W. Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury, in co-operation with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau.

The Hanes plan originally called for repeal of the capital stock and excess profits taxes and abandonment of the undistributed profits tax remnant, cut by Congress at the last session to 2½ per cent. The revenue thus sacrificed would be made up by an increase in the regular corporation income tax.

The modified plan, however, calls for retention of the capital stock and excess profits taxes. Besides substitution of a flat 18 per cent tax on large corporations, the program consists of the following: Removal of the $2,000 limit in existing law on the amount a corporation may deduct for capital losses; extension from one to three years of the length of time allowed a corporation in which to take deductions from income for losses sustained in a bad year, and inclusion in the law of a provision permitting corporations to revalue their capital stock upward, thus cuttnig down excess profits taxes, each year instead of each three years, as at present.

Since these proposals would result in loss of revenue, the Presi-

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

Rarely is the ordinary mortal given a glimpse of what happens in the private rooms of the Supreme Court Justices. But here is an authentic glimpse: Soon after he joined the august nine, Justice Frankfurter discovered that the justices cheat a little on what they wear on the bench beneath their robes; they take off their coats and vests and put on cooler, more comfortable alpaca coats.

John Roosevelt
. . . on his toes

* * * *

So Mrs. Frankfurter dug up an old alpaca coat for her husband to wear, one with several moth holes and one pocket half torn off, a relic of his early professorial days. He wore it in comfort, until one Saturday when he was summoned from his office to the regular secret conference of the Justices. He dispensed with his robe, wearing only his old alpaca, only to discover to his horror that all his colleagues were wearing cutaway coats.

* * * *

When lunch time arrived he hastened to his office, discarded his alpaca, and put on his cutaway to wear to the afternoon session of the weekly conference . . . As he entered the sanctum his incredulous eyes fell first on Chief Justice Hughes, who had discarded his cutaway and with a gesture of almost supernal kindliness, had changed to an old alpaca.

"—as Polish as Warsaw, Ind."

There are things about Hitler and his regime that I do not admire. But it happens that I once spent five months in the utterly German and Prussian city of Danzig, and when it seems that England and France and eventually, perhaps, the whole world, may go to war to secure Danzig for the Poles, I am incredulous; I want to pinch myself.

* * * *

If Danzig is Polish because Poles once passed that way, then St. Louis or Prairie du Chien, Wis., are French because Frenchmen once passed that way, and should be surrendered at once . . . The proportion of Poles is as great in Chicago as it is in Danzig.

* * * *

And as for the Corridor, it would be about as just to give Oklahoma, on the ground that it is a land-locked State, a corridor through Texas to the Gulf as it is to cut East Prussia off from the rest of Germany . . . Or to give Canada a corridor across our country plus New Orleans as a port . . . Danzig, I can testify, is as German as Leipzig or blutwurst or Heidelberg . . . But then no one believes England will fight to make Danzig Polish. Maybe the Poles will let the Germans build a viaduct over the Corridor.

"—John half leaped prematurely"

Young John Roosevelt evoked a number of indulgent smiles when he served as his father's aide at the President's last speech. Toward the close, each time it seemed the speech was about to end, John would half leap off his chair toward F. D. R. Each time he would sink back again . . . When the speech ended, John was off like a deer and at his father's arm while the last word was still echoing.

* * * *

Since the Irish produce more than their share of American political genius, the election of a Catholic to the Presidency some day would seem inevitable . . . The current Farley-for-Vice-President boom, should he be bracketed on a ticket with an elder statesman—and should they be elected—might bring on the inevitable without the rancors and stresses of another campaign like that of Al Smith in 1928 . . . Farley in the White House would surely allay the fears of some citizens about such a contingency.

Ohio WPA Flouts Law, Inquiry Told

Administrative Costs Exceed Legal Limit,

The Ohio WPA spends far more on administrative costs than the law allows; two construction projects cost twice the sum needed if they had been built by private contractors, and WPA labor on one project is only 25 per cent efficient, witnesses yesterday told the House committee investigating the WPA.

George J. Shillito, a committee investigator, asserted that Ohio administrative costs amount to 8 or 9 per cent of the total WPA expenditure in the State. He said 1,119 persons were carried on the rolls as administrative employes, while another 1,200, assigned to the "State supply fund project," were doing administrative work. The legal limitation on administrative costs is 5 per cent.

Hopkins Order Produced

Shillito produced a State WPA order referring to authority for the supply fund project given by Harry L. Hopkins, former WPA administrator and now Secretary of Commerce.

Representative Taber (Republican), of New York, asked whether the supply fund project was "a subterfuge to keep the books from showing that the administrative expense is as high as it is." The project had the effect of splitting administrative expenses in two, replied Shillito, who is on furlough from the WPA's investigative division.

Harrington Criticizes Probe

New York, May 15 (AP).—Col. F. C. Harrington, works progress administrator, said tonight the investigators of the Congressional committee checking on the WPA were "entirely absorbed in hunting things to criticize."

"So far as I can learn, not one of them has yet told the committee anything about the accomplishments of this program or the good it has done the unemployed," he told the ninth annual conference of United States mayors. "Small faults have been magnified and great virtues entirely omitted."

Col. Harrington said that of all Senators who had opposed the WPA, he could not think of one who had notified him he did not want any work relief in his State.

"Fundamentally we have to choose between continuing our work program along its present line and abandoning it in favor of the dole," he added. "The latter would be a mistake of the bost unfortunate kind."

He said there were 2,600,000 WPA employes as of May 8 and there was no intention of leveling off immediately to 2,000,000—the 12-month average to be applied aftetr July.

Mayors Edward J. Kelly, of Chicago, and Harold H. Burton, of Cleveland, joined in calling for continuance of WPA.

Attorney General Murphy recaled his days as Mayor of Detroit when the city had been hit by "an economic collapse."

"It is an inspiring thought that we came through that ordeal without a single untoward incident of major importance. We did so, I believe, primarily because even in the darkest hour, devotion of the great mass of the people to the ideal of civil liberty did not falter."

Monopoly Inquiry Opens Today Into Frozen Capital

The Monopoly Committee today will open a three-week inquiry into "big money" interests, banks and investment houses, to determine why capital is not flowing into private enterprise.

By business and Government officials alike, the hearings are regarded as one of the most essential inquiries in the Federal Government's general research to disclose the obstacles to recovery.

An array of nationally prominent financiers, including a partner in the firm of J. P. Morgan, will appear before the committee, headed by Senator Joseph O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming.

Leon Henderson, newest member of the Securities and Exchange Commision, which will conduct the questioning before the committee, said:

"We hope this examination will show the difficulties of the small man in tapping the reservoir of institutional money from big institutions.

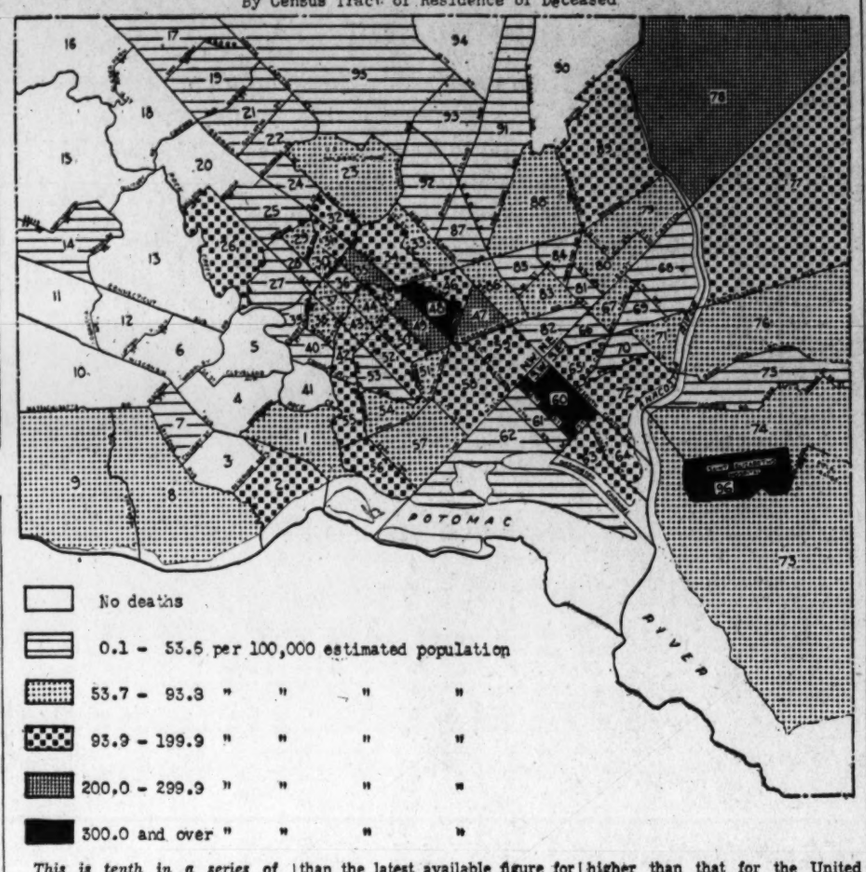
D. C.'s Death Rate Exceeds National Average Due to Many Crowded, Insanitary Areas

TUBERCULOSIS DEATH RATE (ALL FORMS) IN THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, 1938
(Including D.C. residents at Glenn Dale Sanatorium)
(per 100,000 estimated population)
By Census Tract of Residence of Deceased



This is tenth in a series of articles on social and health conditions in the Capital. The eleventh will appear tomorrow.

By Eugene Pharo.

Today tuberculosis points a bony finger at the sections in Washington where crowded, unsanitary dwellings and poverty have brought rates of disease and death far in excess of the national average, and contrasting starkly with those of the District as a whole.

The facts are pictured in a neighborhood study for 1938 made by the research department of the Washington Council of Social Agencies, and imposed over other detailed studies for recent years. The sections that are brought into severe prominence are in the main those already marked in other ways as below the national and District average.

First is the picture of the Capital as a whole. This reveals a death rate of 83.8 persons per 100,000 population, which is 75 per cent greater than the latest available figure for the United States, of 53.6 for 1937.

Then come the neighborhood tracts, where the highest tuberculosis death rate in 1938 was 401 persons per 100,000 population, in familiar tract 60 under the shadow of the Capitol. This was more than seven times the national average. Tract 48 in the northwest revealed a rate of 325, which is more than six times the national one. Tracts 35, 47 and 49 in the northwest had rates of 290.8; 225.2, and 226.8, respectively, all more than four times the national rate. Tract 78 in the northeast had the same evil prominence with a rate of 236.7.

Deaths of 588 persons, 177 of them white and 411 of them colored, are included in the statistics. Characteristics of the census tracts where the high rates were found have been displayed in preceding maps and will become more painfully obvious with succeeding ones in this series.

Altogether there were found 27 census tracts where the rate was higher than the average for the District, and 31 in which it was higher than that for the United States. While the 51 tracts held only 65.6 per cent of the city's population, they accounted for 89.3 per cent of the deaths from tuberculosis—thus once again accenting extremes and contrasts within the Capital.

Accuracy of the study is illustrated by the fact that the research department included and apportioned to the correct census tract deaths of District residents that occurred in the Glenn Dale Sanatorium in Maryland, to which some patients had to be removed.

The council once more points out that the heavily shaded areas are among the most densely populated, with a high percentage of dwellings without running water, and without inside toilet and bath. In tract 60 the exact proportions are 22.3 per cent of dwellings without running water, and 66.1 per cent without at least one toilet and bath.

The same kind of deficiencies and handicaps were found in the other tracts where there was a high mortality rate from tuberculosis.

House D.C. Unit Reports Bill to Bar Beer Credit

Retailers Refused Hearing; Told to Take Fight to Senate

Overriding a plea for a public hearing, the House District Committee yesterday reported out a bill sponsored by Chairman Randolph to prohibit purchase of beer on credit by retailers in the District.

William S. Stein, head of the Retail Package Stores Association, who said he represented 400 dealers, asked an opportunity to oppose the measure.

"If you want to fight this bill," said Randolph, "go to the Senate."

Randolph said Stein could make his arguments before the full committee but Stein said he had not expected a hearing and had not prepared his case.

Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, attending his first District Committee meeting, said that brewers sometimes obtain control of retailers by extending them credit. Corporation Counsel Elwood Seal said the Randolph measure would prevent this.

The commitee also approved a bill to relieve the defunct Fidelity Building & Loan Association from payment of $20,600 in District taxes.

Another bill reported favorably permits the Philadelphia, Baltimore & Washington Railroad to extend its tracks to Buzzards Point.

Requiem Mass For Mrs. Hutchison To Be Tomorrow

Requiem mass for Mrs. Carrie E. Hutchison, wife of Frank Hutchison, of Colesville, Md., will be celebrated at 10 a. m. tomorrow at St. John's Church, Forest Glen. Mrs. Hutchison died Sunday.

The daughter of the late George Culver and Mrs. Caroline Culver, she was descended from a family prominent in Montgomery County since before the Revolutionary War. She spent most of her life in the country, taking an active part in the farm women's market movement.

Besides her husband and mother she leaves four daughters, Louise, Dorothy and Catherine Hutchison and Mrs. George Houston, and three sons, Culver, Francis and John, all of Montgomery County. She is also survived by three sisters, Mrs. William F. Harding, of Fairland; Mrs. J. C. Brennan, of Wheaton, and Miss Marie Culver, of Forest Glen, and six brothers, William O., John T., J. Kenneth and F. Earle Culver, of Montgomery County; George P. Culver, of Washington, and Edward L. Culver, of Gettysburg, Pa.

'George in 1940' May Strike Snag

By the Associated Press.

Efforts of his supporters to bind the Georgia delegation to Senator George and put his name before the next Democratic National Convention as a favorite son candidate for President were reported here yesterday to have struck a snag.

Men in a position to know the Georgia political situation said that plans were under way for that State to send an uninstructed delegation to the 1940 convention. This in spite of clamors on the one side for a delegation pledged to George, and on the other for one wedded to the New Deal.

President's Statement on Argentine Beef Wins Him Invitation to Dine on Iowa Steer

President Roosevelt's defense of the Navy's purchase of 48,000 pounds of Argentine canned beef on the ground it is cheaper and better than the home-grown product, yesterday brought him an invitation to eat a "succulent T-bonoe steak from a corn-fed Iowa steer."

HARRINGTON

Representative Harrington (Democrat), of Iowa, extended the invitation from the floor of the House, saying "I recommend it highly."

The President's declaration for Argentine beef must have been due to "either a lack of gastronomical experience or he just must have been misinformed," Harrington said.

Designed to combat modern rustlers, the House yesterday passed and sent to the White House a Senate-approved bill creating a 'national animal theft act" by making it a punishable offense to transport stolen horses and cattle across State lines. Persons convicted would be liable to a $5,000 fine and from one to five years imprisonment, or both.

Jacob Gould Schurman, president of the first American commission to the Philippines under President McKinley in 1899, urged Senate and House insular leaders yesterday to "complete America's noble duty to the islands honorably."

The Senate committee will consider in executive session tomorrow a bill for establishing trade quotas with the Philippines pending complete independence in 1946.

Schurman, in a letter to House and Senate committee chairmen, said, "no independence can be lasting unless it is based on a sound economic foundation, and I believe the American people will desire to give the Filipinos not only fair but generous treatment during the difficult period they must face as they approach the date when the guiding hand of the United States is withdrawn."

Congressional bill production has encountered something of a depression.

Senators and House members have introduced about 9,500 bills and resolutions since Congress convened in January, compared with some 10,250 two years ago in the first session of the preceding Congress.

Of the bills introduced this year, 120 have become law or are awaiting the President's signature.

Dr. Carstens Urges End of Disparity in Aid Given to Dependent Children and Aged

Leaders in child welfare in Washington met yesterday at the home of Mrs. Eugene Meyer. Left to right—Dr. C. C. Carstens, executive director of the National Child Welfare League; the Rev. Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, of Catholic University; Miss Elas Casrendyck, of the Childrens Bureau, and Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, of the District League of Voteless Women Voters

Representatives of Washington child welfare agencies yesterday heard Dr. C. C. Carstens, executive director of the National Child Welfare League, urge cancellation of the disparity in social security benefits for aged and dependent children.

Speaking at a meeting at the home of Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Dr. Carstens noted that in February, 1939, more than $35,000,000 of social security benefits went to aged, an increase of 7 per cent from the same month a year ago, whereas only $8,000,000, a decrease of 26 per cent from a similar period in 1938, was paid for support of dependent children.

Dr. Maurice S. Sheehy, of Catholic University, asked that careful investigation be made of prospective foster homes before children are placed in them. Foster homes, however, are far preferable to institutional upbringing of children, he said, since they afford children the love and affection they need, give them the approval and recognition necessary to growth and satisfy craving for advancement and achievement.

Other speakers were Miss Elsa Castendyck, of the Children's Bureau, and Mrs. Louis Ottenberg, of the District of Columbia League of Voteless Women Voters. The latter urged an additional appropriation of $110,000 to meet pressing needs of the public child welfare agencies in the District.

Progress reports on recommendations of a survey by the Child Welfare League of local children's agencies were made by representatives of St. Rose's Technical School, Hillcrest Orphanage, Jewish Foster Home, St. John's Orphanage, St. Anne's Infant Asylum, Swartzell Methodist Home for Children, Washington Home for Foundlings, Episcopal Home for Children and the Baptist Home for Children.

Colored Youth, 19, to Face an Inquest Today Into Soldier's Death in Alexandria Crash

THE WASHINGTON POST BUREAU, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone TEmple 3767. Delivery Service, Phone ALexandria 247.

James H. Boyd, colored, 19, of 116 South Fayette street, is being held at police headquarters awaiting an inquest at noon today into the death of Jackson Hoopaugh, a retired soldier, who lived in the Soldiers Home, Washington. Boyd was the driver of the automobile that struck and fatally injured Hoopaugh on Sunday night, on River road at Hume avenue. Dr. Llewellyn Powell, city coroner, will hold the inquest.

Boyd told police the man walked in front of his machine. He stopped and aided in placing him in the car of William Mervine to be taken to Alexandria Hospital, where he died.

Hoopaugh was a native of Maysville, Ga., and after 25 years in the Army, was honorably discharged on November 8, 1938.

6 Girls Held in Thefts

After working for several weeks on numerous thefts from stores in the city, principally chain stores, Detective Russell A. Hawes yesterday brought before Judge James girls, ranging in age from 8 to 16 years. Their cases will be heard later.

Detective Hawes notified mothers of the girls and recovered part of the stolen goods, including cameras, hand bags, cosmetics, rings and a small bank for raising funds for the Leper Mission. The officer also states he expects to have a white woman in court in connection with contributing to the delinquency of the girls.

A. L. Boothe Speaks

Armistead L. Boothe, city attorney, spoke last night at the joint meeting of the Alexandria, Va., and Montgomery County, Md., Soroptimist Clubs in the George Mason Hotel. Members of Wahsington, Arlington County and Baltimore Clubs were present.

Mrs. W. Clifton Cunningham and Mrs. Samuel Berman were in charge of the program, and Mrs. Hazel Van Middlesworth, president of the local club, presided.

Ickes Asked to Use Md. Men on Canal

Secretary Ickes was asked yesterday to put Maryland unemployed at work restoring the Chesapeake & Ohio Canal instead of drawing them from the civil service rolls.

Representative Byron (Democrat), of Maryland, wrote to the Secretary that few of the unemployed who live near the canal are certified according to civil service regulations and so eligible for WPA work.

Byron hopes that the new Comptroller General, Fred H. Brown, would make a new ruling if the Interior Department requested.

Sub-committee To Air Dispute Over Gallinger

Lengthy Hearing Today Seen by Senator Overton

Recent squabbles over administration of Gallinger Hospital and the last agreement reached by the District Commissioners and George Washington and Georgetown medical schools are due to be aired today before the Senate sub-committee on District apprporiations.

Hoping to conclude the hearings this week, Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, said the inquiry may continue all day.

Plans for Aqueduct

The sub-committee yesterday heard U. S. Army engineers outline plans for a new Washington aqueduct which will cost $12,000,000 and must be in operation by 1950.

Water Department officials testified that the District now gives the Federal Government $450,000 worth of water yearly and that it is running $500,000 short annually in setting aside enough money to pay for the reservoir. Auditor Daniel J. Donovan said only $6,000,000 will be available by 1950.

The 1940 District supply bill carries $20,000 to finance a study for the aqueduct, which District officials hope to start building by 1944.

New Equipment Approved

The sub-committee approved a proposal of Water Department officials that $9,000 be spent for new equipment and three meter readers be added to the staff so that water bills can be mailed out quarterly instead of annually. The system will save $50,000 yearly, it was said.

Miss Colhoun's Funeral Is Today

Funeral services for Miss Sarah Elizabeth Colhoun, 83, daughter of the late Rear Admiral Edmund Ross Colhoun and Mrs. Mary Reed Colhoun, will be held at 2 p. m. today at her home, 1440 Fairmont street northwest. Burial will be in Arlington Cemetery. She died Sunday at Garfield Hospital, where she had been a patient for two months after suffering a hip injury in a fall.

A native of Missouri, she had come to Washington in 1882. She lived with her sister, Miss Helen Augusta Colhoun, and a cousin, Miss Almira Reed Harris. Another cousin, Dr. James Bordley, jr., and Mrs. Bordley, of Baltimore, will attend the funeral. She also leaves several cousins in Missouri.

Washington Schools May Get Holiday to Welcome Royalty

Addition of almost 100,000 full-throated citizens to the throng expected to greet the British sovereigns in Washington will be considered tomorrow when the Board of Education decides whether to suspend classes June 8.

Dr. Frank W. Ballou, superintendent of schools, said the children never had been given a similar holiday, but pointed out, "There's never been a visit like this, either."

Plans Released

Detailed plans for Washington's welcome, released yesterday by Capt. Patrick H. Tansey, assistant engineer commissioner and chairman of the reception committee, revealed that only police and State Department cars will be permitted on the parade route for two hours prior to the arrival of Their Majesties at Union Staotion at 11 a. m.

No parking will be permitted after 8 a. m. along the route, which runs from the station along Delaware avenue to the east front of the Capitol, down Constitution and Pennsylvania avenues and into the White House grounds by the southeast gate.

Fireman to Report

All firemen not on regular duty will report in white gloves in the parade zone at 8 a. m.

British and American flags and shields will line the route. The decorations are being purchased by the State Department. Streetcar loading platforms are to be removed from Pennsylvania avenue from Fourth to Fifteenth streets northwest by 7:30 a. m.

The Public Utilities Commission will issue orders covering bus and streetcar traffic for the day throughout the city.

First aid tents and ambulance stations are being located under supervision of Dr. A. Magruder MacDonald.

Nazis Prepare Danzig Revolt, Ex-Mayor Says

Arms, Storm Tropos, Reservists Ready Since 1937, He Says

By Dr. Hermann Rauschning,

By Wireless and Special Wire to The Post. Former Nazi President of the Danzig Senate.

Torun, Poland, May 15.—For many years the National Socialist campaign in Danzig has been prepared for what may now take place at any moment. For many years there have been nightly arrivals of large quantities of arms for the free city.

Danzig, which under its statute can have no army, but merely a police force, is at present in possession of everything in the way of arms and ammunitions that can be utilized for military defense or for a "ptsch"—tanks, heavy shells, artillery and flamethrowers.

For eyars the National Socialist Senate of Danzig, pursuing its action under the very eyes of the League of Nations commissioners in Danzig, has compelled the young people of the city in defiance of the constitution to perform their military service in Germany.

Attacks Are Planned

Those trained reservists, now recalled, are complemented by special S. S. and S. A. detachments sent to Danzig in the guise of tourists.

Within the Free City itself the flower of the most brutal troops of the German S. S. are prepared to simulate a revolution and to create a situation calculated to menace world peace: Pogroms against the Polish minority, attacks upon the rights given Poland by treaty and against the munitions dump on the Kesterplatte, the harbor rights and the Polish post, terrorism directed against the Polish customs officials, the Polish commissioner general and the high commissioner of the League of Nations.

All this would be designed to show that Danzig is no longer willing to accept the symbols of Polish sovereignty in the Free City. The idea is to remove all these institutions at one stroke and thereby to destroy the Polish rigsts in Danzig. The intention is also that this shall not take place without bloodshed.

Pretext for Intervention

According to the constitution of the Free City it is Poland's right and duty to intervene in the event of disturbances that cannot be quelled by the Danzig authorities.

If Poland abstains, this is capitulation in the face of terrorism and amounts to the renunciation of the Polish rights in Danzig. If, on the other hand, Poland intervenes this offers the Danzig government an opportunity to resist the Polish action by force of arms. If Danzig can hold out for a few hours against the Polish divisions, if there is bloodshed and thereby the definite proo of the will of the Free City to maintain itself, if Poland could be put in the wrong—this would not only afford Germany a pretext to intervene but it is clear that Great Britain and France would take up the case.

It would be easy to divide public opinion in the west and to mislead it. This is the plan of which I have just been informed from an especially reliable source. The apprehension has also been expressed that a general configaration must inevitably follow, since Poland would be unable to accept such a solution of the Danzig problem without an irreparable loss of prestige.

Similar Plan in 1937

This plan was communicated to me in the hope that if its authors were warned that their intentions were known there might be some means of avoiding a world war on the subject of Danzig.

I am convinced that this plan actually exists. In January, 1937, I was informed of a completely similar plan. It was given up at the eleventh hour. And in my earlier political position I have also had knowledge of attempts to equip an army in Danzig and to bring about reincorporation of the Free City in the Reich.

Since that time the brutality and the audacity of the National Socialist leaders in Danzig have considerably increased. No means will be neglected.

Paris Offers New Peace-Front Plan

was generally expected to end in a compromise agreement next week in Geneva.

Prime Minister Chamberlain, answering questions in the House of Commons today, said Halifax and Bonnet are planning to discuss the matter with Potemkin, after the League of Nation's Council at Geneva begins its postponed session next Monday.

A copy of the Soviet note to Britain was promptly forwarded from London to Paris.

In British official circles the hope was openly expressed that the Geneva discussions would lead to successful conclusion of the negotiations with the U. S. S. R. A belief was indicated that the Russian note, handed to British Ambassador Sir William Seeds in Moscow last night, was written before last Friday's announcement of the Anglo-Turkish defense accord in the Mediterranean area.

Since Friday there have been indications of an increasing Soviet willingness to meet Britain and France halfway. These indications were enhanced by an editorial in Izvestia, Soviet government organ, praising the Anglo-Turkish accord and intimating that Russia may soon arrive at a similar agreement with Turkey.

Commons Debate Scheduled

Questioned by Conservative Robert Boothby as to whether Poland and Rumania had formally objected to any reciprocal Anglo-French agreement with Russia, Chamberlain reminded Parliament that Potemkin had but recently exchanged views with both the Rumanians and the Poles in his recent visits to Bucharest and Warsaw.

The premier said it would be "inappropriate" at present to disclose the Polish and Rumanian views conveyed to Britain.

Observers, however, took note of the growing amity between Poland and Russia as another sign pointing to a general softening of friction all around that will probably enable the powers to find the formula under which Europe's "peace front" can be completed with the enlistment of Russia.

The whole vital question is headed for an airing in Commons Friday when, Chamberlain announced, a debate on foreign affairs will be held.

Argentina Bans All Foreign Ism Groups

Both German, Italian Units Must Adopt Democratic Tenets

Buenos Aires, May 15 (AP).—President Ortiz issued a decree today making mandatory dissolution of the German Nazi Party and all other political organizations in Argentina directed from abroad.

Besides the Nazi Party, the most prominent organizations affected included the Fascist and Dopolavoro workmens' groups, both Italian-directed, and the Spanish Falangist (Fascist) Party.

These parties, however, were given 90 days in which to subscribe to "democratic principles" which the decree sadi must govern their by-laws.

The presidential decree followed an inquiry inot Nazi activities, ordered after publication of an alleged Nazi plan to annex Patagonia, southern tip of Argentina.

The new decree banned all foreign political insignia, uniforms, banners or songs and forbade activities for or against political institutions of foreign countries. Foreign organizations must write their names, statutes and by-laws in Spanish.

"Every association, whether formed by foreigners or not, must originate only within Argentine territory," it was decreed. "No association may depend on foreign governments * * * or receive subsidies or donations of whatever nature from abroad save those of charitable character which may be received after dut notice to the Argentine government."

additional 25,000 refugees made up mainly of children. After that period no Jewish immigration would be allowed without acquiescence of the Arabs.

The White Paper was said to point out that the failure of the London conference of Jews and Arabs early this year forced the government to adhere more or less to final proposals at conclusion of the conference.

While the Jews maintain that their claims are clearly stated in the League of Nations mandate under which Britain governs Palestine, the White Paper, it is said, will state unequivocally that Palestine never was intended by the mandate framers to become a Jewish state or commonwealth.

Arab Claims Annulled

At the same time the government annuls Arab claims to Palestine as given in their interpretation of the McMahon correspondence during the World War.

The government recommends:

The present mandatory government to retain complete control of Holy Land affairs while slowly introducing Palestinians into government posts. As soon as peace and order are established, certain governmental departments would be delegated immediately to Palestinians with British advisers.

Palestinian department heads also would participate in the executive council.

No Legislative Body

There is no intention under the present plan of establishing an elected legislatvie body, but after five years the government proposes appointng an appropriate body for recommendation of a constitution.

If after a decade establishment of an independent state is deemed impossible the British government will consult with representatives of Palestinjan institutions, the League of Nations and neighboring Arab states with regard to the Holy Land's future.

The government proposes to endow the high commissioner with special powers to regulate and restrict and prohibit land sales in any area of Palestine throughout the transitional period.

The white paper will be issued simultaneously Wednesday in London, Jerusalem, Baghdad, Cairo and Mecca.

Peace Rests With France, Duce Asserts

'Certain Problems' Must Be Solved, He Tells Workmen

By the United Press.

Turin, May 15.—Premier Mussolini today attached a more militant warning to his Sunday peace speech by asserting, with pointed reference to France, that "certain problems" must be solved before the menace of a European war can be banished.

Mussolini told 50,000 workers of the new Fiat automobile and airplane motors plant here that these outstanding problems must be prevented from reaching "the chronic stage."

It was believed that Il Duce might have referred also to Germany's quarrel with Poland, in which he would like to see a peaceful settlement eliminating the danger of Italy being drawn into war under Mussolini's projected military alliance with Reich Fuehrer Hitler.

"Italy Desires Peace"

Mussolini, thumping his gloved fist to emphasize his words, reiterated that Italy desires peace.

Then he added his stipulations.

"I spoke yesterday about our desire for peace," he said. "But peace is only possible if certain problems are solved before they reach the chronic stage."

His listeners in turn—only 50 miles from the fortified Italo-French frontier which Mussolini will tour during the next week—had no doubt that he referred to Italy's "natural aspiration" demands against France, including greater Italian rights in the Suez Canal, Tunis and the Jibouti-Addis Ababa railroad.

Qualifies Statement

In this connection, members of Mussolini's entourage pointed out that in his Sunday speech Il Duce carefully qualified his statement that there are "now actually in Europe no questions to justify a war" and stress was laid on his choice of the words "actual" need for a war "now."

Italy's King to Visit Berlin

Special Cable to The Post.

Rome, May 15.—King Victor Emmanuel III and Queen Helena of Italy will make a state visit to Germany the end of this month, immediately after the signature of the Italo-German political and military pact, it was learned today.

This confirms the reports of the visit already current in Germany, although official circles here still insist nothing is "officially" known about it. The visit is a return of Reichfuehrer Hitler's journey to Italy last May and will be marked by similar expansive state functions.

heightened by arrest of a suspected crank. He was seized by spike-helmeted Quebec provincial police, but no details were made public as to his offense.

In the afternoon, the two royal automobiles, long, sleke and mauve-colored, made another test run through Quebec's narrow, hilly streets. They were escorted by 50 or more motorcycle policemen, traveling in squadron formation.

Thousands of visitors continued pouring into the already crowded city, and some, it was made clear by a local editor, were not altogether welcofe. To appreciate his ire, it must be understood that there has been a terrific, behind-the-scenes contest for invitations to meet or dine with Their Majesties.

The chief qualification for a "command" to this or that function is not one's social position but his or her official position—a situation which perhaps will be paralleled in Washington in June.

Editor Hits Snobbery

What aroused the editor of the Quebec Chronicle-Telegraph, the 175-year-old English language daily, was news that the Speaker of the House of Commons and Mrs. Pierre F. Casgrain, with their daughter, were coming here from Ottawa to attend the various functions in honor of the King and Queen, planning then to go to Montreal and Ottawa.

This the editor denounced as "shockingly selfish."

"If we understand correctly," he continued, "a number of Privy Councillors and other Dominion personages are similarly descending upon us to sun themselves in the smiles of Majesty at the expense of local citizens.

"Indeed, there is every reason to believe that an attempt will be made by a certain group of privileged functionaries to dance attendance upon the King and Queen right across the Dominion, standing between them and a certain number of local citizens in every community honored with a visit.

"We have little hope that our protest will be heeded—already the arrangements have been advanced too far to be easily altered—but we are placing it on record, nevertheless, and when the proper time comes there will be a day of reckoning for this inconsiderate, sycophanatic snobbery that wishes to allow no one but the same favorite few near the throne."

Philadelphia Poison Inquiry Split Over FBI

District Attorney's Request for G-Men Angers Police Heads

By the United Press.

Philadelphia, May 15.—Authorities investigating a mass murder merchandising syndicate enlisted the aid of G-men tonight in their search for six fugitives, described as key figures in the greatest ring of killers in American criminal history.

One of the fugitives is Mrs. Rose Carina, the widow "with the kiss of death." She is known to have been in New Jersey since a warrant for her arrest on murder charges was issued here, thus enabling local officials to call in Federal agents.

Another fugitive is Dominic Rodeo, sought in connection with the drowning of Joseph Arena off the New Jersey coast. Officials refused to reveal the identity of the other fugitives.

Hoover, Kelley to Confer

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, promised to place all of the facilities of his organization at the disposal of local authorities. It was learned Hoover will come to Philadelphia Wednesday or Thursday to confer with District Attorney Charles Kelley, who requested his aid. Kelley's request precipitated an open break between city police and county authorities.

Police Supt. Edward Hubbs announced:

"From now on police investigation will be conducted from the homicide squad offices in detective headquarters."

The homicide squad members previously had worked on the case out of the county detective bureau.

The squad was ordered to go over its records on the entire investigation, retaining its own and returning those which belong to the district attorney and the county detectives.

"Case Too Big," Says Kelly

Kelly had complimented the work of local authorities in the case, but added:

"This is too big a case for personal jealousies to enter into. It is the biggest ever known. We welcome the aid of the Federal Bureau of Investigation."

Assistant District Attorney Vincent P. McDevitt announced that murder indictments will be sought from the May grand jury this week against 12 of the 26 persons now in custody. He plans to begin trials later this month.

McDevitt also announced that an autopsy on the body of Gaenao Peno, 35, of Salem, N. J., revealed that he died of natural causes. Peno died in Philadelphia General Hospital last Monday, a day before detectives began searching for him in connection with the death of his first wife, believed to have been among the 100 or more victims of the merchants of death.

Snyder Against Northeastern Army Airport

House Colleagues Also Disapprove; 2,000 H.P. Air Engine Developed

Disapproval of funds for a major Army air base in northern New nEgland is being considered by the House military appropriations subcommittee, its chairman said yesterday, on the ground "it might be construed as unfriendly to Canada."

Chairman Snyder said he had discussed the matter of a Northeastern base—one of four large bases contemplated under the $300,000,000 emergency Air Corps expansion program—with committeemen and other House members. He found considerable sentiment against it, and will propose that it be abandoned for the present.

Suggests Commercial Use

The sub-committee begins hearings today on the project and other supplemental Army estimates totaling $309,500,000 in direct appropriations and contract authorizations. Principal provisions of the President's special defense program—expansion of the Air Corps, strengthening of Panama Canal defenses and speeding up the "educational orders" plan—will be cared for in the measure.

Snyder suggested that instead of an Army base, the Government develop the site under consideration as an airport for transatlantic air operations.

"The United States-Canadian border has been unfortified for 100 years," he declared. "Construction of an air base there would not be directed against Canada but would be widely construed as such. A large commercial field on the area will be needed for oceanic air operations just ahead of us. It would be available for Army use in war and yet not constitute fortification of the border."

World's Largest Engine

Meanwhile, the United States took a long step forward in its drive for supremacy in the air as the War Department announced development here of the "world's largest and most powerful air-cooled aircraft engine." Assistant Secretary of War Louis Johnson said that the Wright Aeronautical Corporation with the assistance of the Army Air Corps, had developed an 18-cylinder, 2,000 horsepower air-cooled radial engine.

The new engine, known as the Duplex Cyclone, is 500-horsepower more powerful than the engine heretofore given top rating by the Civil 1,500-horsepower, "Cyclone 14," also Aeronautics Authority. This is the a double-row air-cooled radial, and has two rows of 7 cylinders, instead of the 9 of the new model. The "Duplex Cyclone," a development of the "Cyclone 14," will be on display May 20 at the Army exhibit at the New York World's Fair.

Indicating the power of the new engine, Johnson said that only two of them are required to fly a huge long-range Consolidated flying boat just launched. The ship, flown for the first time last week, carries 52 passengers and a crew of 5.

Coast Guard Reserve

The House yesterday passed and returned to the Senate with minor amendments two measures to enlarge Coast Guard officer strength and eliminate over-age enlisted men. Also approved was a bill to set up a voluntary Coast Guard Reserve, consisting of motor-boat and yacht owners. The latter measure now goes to the Senate.

Two additional rear admirals—the engineer-in-chief and assistant commadant—and increase in the officer strength from 594 to 750 are authorized, together with voluntary and enforced retirement of enlisted men with 20 years' service.

Hitler Reported Preparing Blast Against Nations Aligned With Britain's 'Peace Front'

Berlin, May 15.—Reichsfuehrer Hitler is reported to be preparing a strong declaration against the Nations aligning themselves with Great Britain's alleged "encirclement" policy and may withdraw its diplomatic representatives from their capitals, it was reported tonight.

Reports which found no corroboration in official quarters said that Hitler, angered by Britain's success in winning Turkey over to the armed European "peace front," might refuse to send his ambassador back to London and contemplates calling Ambassador Franz Von Papen from Turkey.

May Recall Von Papen

These reports said that the German ambassador to Poland also might return to Berlin.

Informed Nazis admitted that there were strong possibilities that Germany would undertake some sort of reprisal against the new Anglo-Turkish mutual defense pact.

Von Papen, it was said, may be expected to return from Ankara in the near future to "report" on the situation which aligned Turkey with Britain and France.

Von Papen was understood to have been sent to Ankara recently for the specific purpose of thwarting just such a development.

Meanwhile, arrangements were made for the formal signature within a week or ten days of the Rome-Berlin military alliance.

Ciano to Visit Berlin

Italian Foreign Minister Count Ciano will arrive in Berlin Sunday for the ceremonies, and a joint warning is expected to be delivered that hereafter the armed forces of Italy and Germany must be regarded as one.

The exact day of the signing of the "Pact of Milan" has not been decided upon, but Hitler, it was said, will deliver an "important speech" on the occasion telling the world that the combined fighting strength of the two totalitarian powers will be behind the demands of either country.

New Charges Against Poland

Berlin, May 15 (INS).—The Nazi press tonight leveled a new burst of accusations against Poland, including a charge that two Germans were killed by Polish nationalists.

Ernst Wilhelm Bohle, head of the Nazi Party's foreign organizations, announced today that Germans abroad hereafter will be fully protected by the Reich against expulsions and other repressive measures if they "obey orders not to interfere in the domestic affairs of other nations."

Syrian Cabinet Quits

Damascus, Syria, May 15 (AP).—The government formed April 6 to attempt reconciliation of differences between France and Syrian nationalists, resigned today with the statement that it could not adapt its policy to that of France.

Observers linked the resignation of the cabinet with French plans to hand over Hatay, the former Syrian Sanjak of Alexandretta, to Turkey.

Writer Describes Nazi Defense Line

Berlin, May 15 (AP).—The Limes line, which guards Germany's western frontier and faces France's famed Maginot defense line, is described by Walter Steding, German military writer, as being constructed to withstand "every conceivable possibility of atack."

Writing in the Deutsche Wehr-Beitraege while Reichsfuehrer Hitler and Nazi chiefs are on an inspection tour of western fortifications, Steding indicated Germany and Italy already had decided on a unified supreme military command in the event of war.

Of the fortifications, he said:

"A defense zone of several lines staggered one after the other has been perfectd . . . Stands for machine guns, cannons to ward off armored cars and artillery are complemented by dugouts for troops . . .

"Hundreds of trenches now cut across the countryside. Barbed wire hurdles protect the whole front. Concrete protuberances, water ditches and steep precipices make any attack by tanks or armored cars impossible. Whole mountains were moved and forests chopped down in order to open clear vistas for shooting."

French Cede Alexandretta, Turks Promise To Close Dardanelles to Axis Ships in War

By the United Press.

Paris, May 15.—The Foreign Office said tonight France has agreed to surrender to Turkey her sovereignty over the former Alexandretta Sanjak (District) of Syria as the price of a Franco-Turkish mutual defense pact closing the Dardanelles to Nazi-Fascit warships in event of war.

The Sanjak is now the autonomous Republic of Hatay.

The government has notified Ankara of its agreement to Turkey's demands, a spokesman said, and a formal announcement will be issued within a few days.

Similar to British Pact

The French mutual aid pact will be almost identical to the one which Turkey agreed to sign with Britain last week, giving the Anglo-French "peace front" a highly strategic advantage in the eastern Mediterranean with Turkish assurances that the fortified Dardanelles will be kept open to British and French warships and shipping.

Under the provisions of the agreement the Sanjak, at the eastern end of the Mediterranean opposite Turkey's southern border, will be sliced from the French Syrian mandate and will become a part of Turkey proper after 20 years.

Turkey will recognize the independent sovereignty of the remaining four states of Syria and will respect the independence of Syria once the country is given republican status under negotiations now under way.

Turkey also will undertake to defend Syria against aggression, thereby eliminating the necessity of France maintaining thousands of troops there where it is difficult to supply them with munitions and supplies.

200,000 Troops available

The Turkish government is prepared to send 200,000 troops into Syria, if necessary, to fight off any aggression.

French officials were confident Turkey's projected mutual assistance pacts with Britain and France would not only "neutralize" any attempts to disturb the status quo in the eastern Mediterranean but would give Britain and France an advantage in undertaking offensive operations in event of a Mediterranean war.

If and when Soviet Russia is brought into the "peace front" alongside her friend and neighbor, Turkey, the anti-aggression front could wage an offensive war against any "aggression" by using Rumania on the Black Sea as a base of operation.

Poles, French Confer

Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, May 15.—Franco-Polish military staff talks were resumed today after a lapse of three years, when Gen. Thadee Kasprzicky, Polish minister of national defense, arrived to map out plans for concerted Franco-Polish military action in the event of a German attack on Danzig.

It is considered likely that he will ask the French government to supply Poland with modern war materials which its army badly lacks.

World's Army Doctors Pledge Mutual Esteem

Conclave Ends in Vein Of Friendship Spoken In Five Languages

A conclave of 150 medical officers, representing most of the world's armies, moved on to New York last night after a week in Washington surveying the prospects for humanity in the next war.

At a banquet at the Willard Hotel and at informal gatherings throughout the day delegates to the Tenth International Congress of Military Medicine and Pharmacy spoke of mutual esteem and friendship in five foreign languages and English. The most touching of these words were spoken by a German, highest ranking medical officer in the world, Gen. A. Waldmann, at a luncheon he gave:

"To reconsider the comradeship and friendship that bound us together and which we hope will always continue."

Others Speak in Same Vein

"We will return to our home with this feeling of friendship as a most valued treasure and invisible currents and waves will ever run between us," he concluded.

In a similar vein were farewell messages at the banquet by Gen. Armand Savornin, speaking for the French delegation, and Maj. Gen. C. R. Reynolds, Surgeon General of the U. S. Army and president of the international committee of the congress.

In a paper at one of the final sessions, Capt. William Seaman Bainbridge, U. S. Naval Reserve, one of the founders of the congress, reminded the meeting that "science, suffering and death have no boundaries."

Bainbridge Given Medal

Capt. Bainbridge was presented with a medal cut in his own likeness and paid for by subscription of delegates.

In other sessions the congress heard Brig. Gen. Wallace De Witt recommend more privacy for patients in military hospitals, Dr. Enrique Penedo, of Guatemala, describe a new surgical needle, and Dr. Robert Olesen, assistant surgeon general of the U. S. Public Health Service, forecast that sectional and national health activities may be a by-product of emergency needs.

A proposal for an international medical school for army surgeons, made at sessions last week, was referred to the international committee for study.

A. M. A. Council May Admti Colored Doctors as Members

Associated Press WIREPHOTOS.

Dr. James B. Merrick (right), of Chicago, was awarded the distinguished service medal of the American Medical Association at the convention in St. Louis yesterday for his discovery of the heart disease, coronary thrombosis, said to have permitted marked progress in finding a cure for heart trouble. Dr. Rock Sleyster (left), of Wauwatosa, Wis., is president-elect of the A. M. A.

ordinary surgical knife, Dr. Padgett said.

The mechanical skinner method is "foolproof" even for surgeons untrained in skin grafting and has proven useful in a few cases of skin cancer in which the spreading growth was removed and new skin substituted, he added.

The resolutions on women and colored doctors were offered by the New York delegation, representing the largest State medical society in the Nation.

There are 8,000 to 9,000 women doctors in the country, many of them members of the A. M. A., but too scattered to be able to elect delegates to the governing house of delegates.

Colored doctors, the resolution said, care for 13,000,000 American citizens, "whose collective health problems form one of the most challenging areas in the entire battle line against sickness and disease."

Dr. Fred Moore, of Des Moines, put in a resolution that Iowa Congressmen should be asked to oppose the maternal and child welfare provisions of the Wagner act, provided they are not modified.

Dr. Walter B. Martin, of Norfolk, Va., read a Virginia resolution favoring payment to hospitals, by the Government, whether local, State or Federal, of the full hospital costs of indigent sick.

This resolution would put administration of the funds in the hands of local hospital service organizations to be administered to allow reduced rates to low income groups of patients.

Wage-Hour Vote Delayed in House

workers.

After consultation with Administration leaders, Mrs. Norton told the House that she would not call up the bill "at this time" because of misunderstandings "which have arisen due to the vicious and unreliable propaganda spread by those who first opposed the bill and would repeal it if they dared to do so."

Barden Asks Action

Pointing out that she had been warned that the committee bill would be "torn to shreds" if subjected to amendment from the floor, Mrs. Norton privately intimated she might refrain from making any further attempts at major alteration of the law this session.

On the otoher hand, Representative Barden (Democrat), of North Carolina, committee member who has proposed a long list of agricultural exemptions not included in the Norton bill, said that "the administrator wants the law altered; the committee wants the law altered; the public wants the law altered—I don't see why it shouldn't be altered."

Committee amendments, which Mrs. Norton wanted the House to consider without possibility of change, would have exempted white-collar workers earning $200 or more per month; laborers engaged in cotton ginning, some tobacco operations and handling of fresh fruit and vegetables "immediately off the farm," and operators of rural telephone exchanges.

More flexible hour provisions would have been provided for workers in a wide variety of agricultural operations, but some members of the farm block desire to see them exempted from all wage and hour restrictions whatsoever.

Terminology Confusing

Some opposition to the Norton amendments arose from alleged "confusion" in the terminology employed. "I think ink and paper are cheap enough to write the laws of the United States in plain English," commented Representative Barden.

Despite the reluctance of several Labor Committee members to reopen discussions on the wage-hour amendments, observers yesterday thought the committee would make revisions in the wording of the law, with possibly further exemptions for some types of agricultural laborers to mollify the farm groups.

Mrs. Norton asserted that the farm organizations attacking her proposed amendments were composed of "employers—not employes."

"Farm workers in the United States have just as much right to protection in respect to wages and hours as have the workers in textile mills and other factories," she said.

dent, it is understood, insisted that any revenue sacrificed by throwing out these "deterrents" be made up by hiking corporation taxes in other directions. The most common proposal for offsetting lost revenus has been to increase regular corporation rates.

From the outset of the tax discussions Mr. Roosevelt has agreed to consider plans to revamp the corporation taxes to aid business. The point whicch he has emphasized more than any other, however, has been that there should be no net reduction in the amount of revenue raised by corporation taxes.

Copper derives its name from the Latin word cuprum, which is shortened from aes cyprium, or metal of Cyprus. It was from the island of Cyprus that almost the entire ancient supply of the metal was obtained.

Petworth Liquor Store Fight Renewed

Church Groups Again Object to Permit For Lewis I. Cohen

Representatives of Petworth churches, schools and civic groups yesterday marshalled forces at the District Building for their third protest in six months against "encroachment" of liquor dealers on their neighborhood.

The application under fire was filed by Lewis I. Cohen, of 5008 First street northwest, who seeks a Class A license, permitting off-sale of liquor. He now has a B license for package sale of beer and light wines.

In 1937 and again last year the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board denied Cohen a Class A license. He is represented by F. Joseph ("Jiggs") Donohue, who introduced at the board's public hearing yesterday numerous indorsements of Cohen's application by Petworth residents.

Harvey O. Craver and Ernest F. Henry, appearing in behalf of Petworth Methodist Episcopal Church, said they consider the neighborhood already amply served by liquor stores and that "another would not be an asset."

A statement submitted by the Petworth Citizens Association asserted that many persons bought homes in the Petworth area because of their belief it was to be almost entirely residential and free of liquor establishments.

Alarm at the sale of liquor "so close to our wives and children" was expressed in a petition signed by 102 stockholders of Hampshire Gardens, a co-operative apartment at 4912 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Postlude

Carl R. Youngdahl conducts Augustana College Choir in a concert Monday night in Luther Place Memorial Church. Program of religious compositions by Luther, Paladilhe, Bruckner, Bach, Grieg, Crueger, Christiansen, Sandstrom, Niccolai and Youngdahl.

Luther Place Memorial Church was filled last evening by an audience assembled to hear the Augustana College Choir from Sioux Falls, a mixed chorus singing a cappella under the direction of Carl R. Youngdahl. Because of the religious character of the program, there was no applause, and one could enjoy without interruptions the commendable work of an excellently trained group and the moods stimulated by their sincere readings. The choir is well balanced and has freshness of vocal quality as well as technical ease in part-singing.

The training of the singers in dynamic shading was immediately evident in the opening number of the program, a Ukrainian setting of "Our Father Who Art in Heaven" with effective passages in pianissimo. This was followed by Herman Monson's arrangement of "Ein' feste Burg" which elicited the full volume of the voices and tested their fidelity to pitch in contrapuntal weaving, a delicately written "Benedictus" by Emile Paladilhe, and a beautiful setting by Bruckner of "O Lord Most Holy."

In the second part of the program were heard Bach's radiantly joyful treatment of the text, "Der Geist hilft unser Schwachheit auf, denn wir wissen nicht was wir beten sollen;" Grieg's harmonically interesting "How Fair Is Thy Face," and two compositions by Dr. Youngdahl: "A Christmas Lullaby" and "Jerusalem Road." In the latter the composer used the striking device of a walking theme repeated continuously by the basses as a harmonic foundation for stanzas sung by the rest of the choir.

The concluding section of the program included "Deck Thyself," by the seventeenth century composer, Johann Crueger; Melius Christiansen's "Beauty in Humility," Sandstrom's "Jeg Ved en Vei," and Phillip Niccolai's "Wake, Awake, For Night Is Flying," arranged by Dr. Youngdahl.

U. S. Warship Sails to Amoy Trouble Zone

Japanese Demand for Rule of Foreigners Seen As Shanghai Prelude

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Shanghai, May 15.—The U. S. cruiser Marblehead left Tsingtao today for Amoy, in South China, where a crisis has developed because of the action of the Japanese last week in landing bluejackets and occupying Kulangsu, the International Settlement there.

The British cruiser Birmingham left Hongkong today and was reported to be bound for Amoy.

The Japanese consul-general at Amoy, about 500 miles south of Shanghai, presented five demands yesterday to L. M. Morehouse, the British chairman of the municipal council governing the island of Kulangsu. The demands included control of anti-Japanese elements in the area and appointment of Japanese to the posts of chairman of the municipal council, police commissioner and chief secretary.

Shanghai Action Seen

Because of the demands presented yesterday, foreign observers here believed the Japanese contemplated permanent control of the Amoy International Settlement, possibly as a sort of "trial balloon" with a view to a similar action at Shanghai should the Japanese fail in the demands they have made for revision of the land regulations which fix the status of the International Settlement here.

Wang Chung-Hui, the Chinese foreign minister, commenting on Japan's action at Kulangsu, said today that in his opinion it was aimed at testing the real attitude of other powers toward the situation in the Far East. He said it was a preliminary to seizure of the Shanghai International Settlement and of similar areas elsewhere in China.

A Chinese press dispatch from Foochow said the Japanese were patrolling streets and strategic points in the settlement and that all stores had suspended business. The municipal police were reported to be encountering serious difficulties in carrying out their duties.

Strong Measures in Sight

The Tokyo newspaper Yomiuri published today a sensational article in which it asserted: "With Great Britain and the United States assuming an obstinate attitude, Hachiro Arita, the Japanese foreign minister, has reached a final decision to take fundamental and strong measures for a solution of the issue involving the Shanghai International Settlement.

"The Japanese government now holds the conclusive view that no half-hearted measures will solve the issue and feels there is a necessity for performing a surgical operation."

Japan Again Promises

A Japanese promise to use all possible caution to avoid injuring civilians during bombing operations in China was received with some skepticism in official circles here yesterday. One official called it "the same old promise."

Receipt of the pledge was announced yesterday by Secretary of State Hull.

Hull said the Japanese government advised it would pass on to the military officials in China the representations made by United States Ambassador Grew against the aerial bombings of Chungking, Foochow and other points.

Her Divorce Awarded, Uncontested

the local Health Department regulations, which restrict the milk supply to the Washington milkshed. A third is being prepared by Representative Halleck (Republican), of Indiana.

Pressure From West

The House sub-committee prepared to resume hearings at 10:30 o'clock this morning in the caucus room of the old House Office Building. Bates disclosed that Western Representatives are exerting pressure to force the sub-committee to make its report by June 1.

"I want to do a good job for the District," he said, "and it just can't be done within that time."

J. Edward Burroughs, jr., counsel of the sub-committee, estimates that three to four weeks of hearings will be needed to complete the inquiry.

Today, and probably tomorrow, the Western producers and representatives will have an inning. Halleck, this morning, will present spokesmen for State agencies and dairy producers of Indiana, and he will be followed by Western representatives sponsored by Representative Bolles (Republican), of Wisconsin.

New Source of Wealth Discovered in Scotland

After a geological search lasting two years a rich field of diatomite, a substance used for high explosives, has been discovered at Staffin, a desolate spot in the Skye district of Scotland. The deposit is estimated at 300,000 tons, worth at least $5,000,000.

Diatomite is also used in the construction of hospitals and theaters, and in the manufacture of radio sets, refrigerators, tooth paste and paints.

"The discovery promises to be of great value to Britain," said A. E. Truman, professor of geology at Glasgow University, "Diatomite is usually found in the beds of lakes, and consists of debris and skeletons of untold millions of minute and primitive plants."

Church Becomes Theater

By touching a button, a new church in Villebon-sur-Yvette, near Paris, becomes a motion picture theater. The button controls a panel back of the altar. When the panel is open the building forms a large church. When closed there is a small church for weekday services and a hall beyond which may be used as a film theater or lecture hall with seats for 300 people.

Wallace Wins Stockyard Suit

porting oil in violation of Texas law.

An opinion by Justice Reed, holding that the Federal Housing Administration was not entitled to priority over other creditors in distribution of the assets of a bankrupt corporation; the FHA had insured a loan to the Monterey Brewing Co. and after bankruptcy of that concern sought to collect from its assets.

A decision upholding a section of the 1934 national firearms act prohibiting interstate shipment of sawed-off shotguns and machine guns unless registered with the Federal Government; the opinion by Justice McReynolds reversed a lower court decision in favor of John Miller and Frank Layton, charged with transporting a sawed-off shotgun from Claremore, Okla., to Siloam Springs, Ark.

Firearms Act Upheld

In the firearms decision, the lower court had quashed the indictment, holding the act violated the second amendment which provides that the right of the people to keep and bear arms is necessary to maintenance of a well-regulated militia.

"In the absence of any evidence tending to show that possession or use of a 'shotgun having a barrel of less than 18 inches in length' at this time has some reasonable relationship to the preservation of a well-regulated militia, we cannot say that the second amendment guarantees the right to keep and bear such an instrument," ruled Justice McReynolds.

The Kansas City Stockyards rate controversy dates back to June 14, 1933, when Wallace set aside a schedule of maximum rates to be charged for stockyard services and prescribed a new and lower rate schedule.

Wallace Power Sustained

A month later, the Kansas City commission men obtained a temporary restraining order against the lower rates holding them confiscatory and violating due process. Funds collected in excess of Wallace's schedule were ordered impounded.

After two appeals, the Supreme Court last year held Wallace had not been accorded "full hearing," and the case was remanded to the District court for further proceedings.

Yesterday's decision by Stone sustained Wallace's right to reopen the original proceedings and declared the Secretary "free to determine the reasonableness of the rates." Pending a final order by Wallace, it ordered the impounded funds retained.

Illustrated Stamp Book Is Banned in Britain

"Parables From Stamps," a religious book, has been banned by the British postmaster general because it contained faithful reproductions of stamps of many countries. Among them were a 6-cent United States air mail, a 10-cent Argentina, and a penny Falkland Islands.

It is the first time that the postmaster general has had to request the withdrawal of a book from publication, and he advised the publishers in London that the book had infringed the postoffice acts prohibiting the "manufacture and use of fictitious stamps and postmarks."

84-Page Threat Sent Debutante

Bowsprit, 3 Masts Make Full-Rigger

A full-rigged ship is one with a bowsprit and three masts, all masts being square-rigged. Any vessel square-rigged on all masts is termed full-rigged, writes a correspondent.

A barkentine is called such because it is square-rigged on the fore and schooner-rigged on the other masts. Schooner-rigged means fore and aft rigged. Any craft that has more than two masts with the fore mast square-rigged is in the barkentine class. A bark generally refers to a craft that is square-rigged on two or more masts, with one or more masts schooner-rigged. Thus a four-masted bark would be square-rigged on fore, main and mizzen masts and schooner-rigged on the jigger masts.

A brig is a ship of other days, although some are found in foreign waters. It is a two-masted vessel square-rigged forward and square-rigged aft; a ship square-rigged on two masts. The hermaphrodite brig is really a brigantine and is a two-masted vessel, square-rigged forward and schooner-rigged behind.

He estimated the total wheat supply July 1 would be 974,000,000 bushels. This is 47,000,000 bushels below the 1,021,000,000-bushel level at which a referendum on marketing restrictions could be ordered under the 1938 farm act. The forecast indicates July 1 stocks will be 111,000,000 bushels smaller than July 1 a year ago.

Wallace's estimate of supplies included the current crop estimate of 704,000,000 bushels and an estimated July 1 carryover of 270,000,000 bushels.

At the same time, the Secretary established the 1940 wheat acreage allotment at 62,000,000 bushels, an increase of 7,000,000 acres over 1939 allotments, but 3,500,000 under the seeded acreage this year.

Child, 5, Injured When Hit by Car Near Laytonsville

A 5-year-old child was in serious condition last night after he had been struck by an auto near the home he was visiting in Montgomery County.

The youngster, Paul Stout, of Martinsburg, W. Va., suffered leg and skull injuries when hit on the Laytonsville road, one mile east of Laytonsville, Md. He was taken to Montgomery County General Hospital at Olney.

Paul was playing with two other children, police said, when he ran out into the road from behind a parked truck and was struck by an auto driven by Louis H. Rockenhauser, 27, of Gaithersburg. Rockenhauser was charged with the technical count of reckless driving pending outcome of the child's injuries.

The child and his mother, Mrs. William N. Stout, have been visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Worley.

Circus Opens Amid Furor Of Sounds

Bands, Animals, Clowns Perform in New Setting Of Air-Conditioning

The Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey Circus had all flags flying for its date with Washington yesterday.

The medley of sounds, cries from the midway, bugle notes signaling performers, screams of wild beasts, shouts of peanut venders and blare of bands filled the neighborhood at Twenty-first and C streets northeast.

Out back of the big top—the right place to see a circus—the ingredients of the spectacle began assembling at 2 p. m. Even at 2:15, when a bugle blew, the gold-braid-and-red-clad men and women, the Zulu savages, animal trainers, acrobats, zebras and the spear carriers still took things easy.

Prancing Horses Lead

But on the split second of 2:30 they moved through the tent entrance in perfect formation and space.

The band led, blaring the "Stars and Stripes Forever." Two uniformed men, on prancing chestnut horses, led the route that thousands of performers have taken, around the stands. The parade lasted 7 minutes. The band, seated behind neon lights, played a medley of dashing airs and the show was on with a whoop from a band of mounted Far Eastern riders who twice circled the stands at full gallop.

A mob of lions and tigers, "natural enemies since time began," performed for Dolly Jacobs and Terrell Jacobs as follows: Tigers and lions leaped through rings of fire while, off from the cage, two clowns appeared.

Here Come the Clowns

One of the clowns, with a bellows, filled the clothing of another clown with air and it seemed he would burst. But another clown came along with a sword and punctured the inflated clothes and all was right again. Children screamed.

The big top swarmed with feminine aerialists, in white costumes, who gyrated to music in ballet mood. Then came the great stars, the Cristiana Troupe, the Davusos, Fritzi Bartoni, Europe's Queen of the flying trapeze . . .

New adventures in the circus were: Box seats, the horse fair that exhibited 70 Kentucky thoroughbreds, air-conditioning, and a broadening of acts that afforded the audience a greater display of the better offerings. The show is here until Wednesday night, keeping its date with what circus folk said was one of America's best circus towns.

Life of 150 Years Forecast With Aid Of Gland Grafting

New York May 15 (INS).—Dr. Serge Voronoff, known for monkey gland rejuvination experiments, predicted today, "the average life of human eings wuold be extended to nearly 150 years," when grafting of glands becomes a general practice.

Dr. Veronoff said, "Some of the most illustrious European statesmen have benefited by the grafting of the glandular tisues."

"It is beteer now to talk of the prevention of senility and the lengthening of human life than of rejuvenation, in a narrow sense," he continued, "Among my patients many have reached the age of 85, and they appear to be doing well mentally and physically.

"Assuming that the first grafting of gland tisues is done at the age of 65, the effect may last as long as ten years, the average period being about seven.

"Now a second treatment can be given. Its beneficial results, however, are likely to be relatively shorter,, say about four or five years.

Leeds Manor Sale Accounting Denied

Col. Wade H. Cooper yesterday lost in the Court of Appeals his effort to compel the Comptroller of the Currency to account for selling the Manor of Leeds Orchard, in Fauquier County, Va., for $15,000. Cooper sued as president of Continenal Trust Co. and Commercial National Bank, of Washington. He claimd that the Comptroller allowed the receivers of the institutions to sell the orchard for "an infinitesimal fraction of its real value," which he placed in excess of $100,000.

Chief Justice Groner said for the court that the sale of the property complied with the law and that the Comptroller had authority to use his best judgment. Cooper made no claim of fraud.

Boy to Cross Sea AloneforOperation

Juenau, Wis., May 15 (AP).—Carl Woehrman, 10, son of a daisy plant worker, is going to Germany, traveling most of the distance alone, to have an eye operation.

His father, Frederick Woehrman, said today he would take Carl to Chicago but that the youth would travel to New York alone and would sail May 25 on the Deutschland.

"My brother in Germany is able to pay for the operation, so we are sending Carl over there," the father said.

2 Tried in Forgery of Check Stolen From Safe

Carman D. Quantrille and Henry R. Milton went on trial yesterday for forgery of a check alleged to have been in a safe they previously were convicted of stealing. The men were linked to the safe theft by the check, but won a new trial when Charles Smith and Walter Gray confessed that they had stolen the safe. Assistant District Attorney Jackson is prosecuting the forgery charge.

Group to Fight Totalitarianism

New York, May 15 (AP).—Formation of a committee pledged to defend intellectual freedom in the United States against totalitarian forces was announced today by Dr. John Dewey, noted educator.

Ninety-six prominent artists, educators and writers are members of the "Committee for Cultural Freedom," including Walter Damrosch, Dorothy Thompson, Max Eastman and John Haynes Holmes.

The committee said the beginnings of totalitarianism were "all too evident" in the United States, also in "the emergence of local political dictators, the violation of civil rights, the alarming spread of phobias of hatred directed against racial, religious and political minorities."

C. I. O. Merges 2 Affiliates in Textile Field

Consolidation Brings 325,000 Workers Into One Union

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 15.—The C. I. O. consolidated its strength in the textile field today through merger of two affiliates that claim a total membership of 325,000 from the industry's 1,250,000 employes.

"We can now face the future, challenging all the complications it will bring," declared Emil Rieve, executive director of the Textile Workers Organizing Committee, mentioned as the probable head of the new union.

The T. W. O. C. was absorbed by the United Textile Workers of America, a charter union in John L. Lewis' vertical union drive. The U. T. W. assumed responsibility for all T. W. O. C. obligations and contracts.

The U. T. W. also gave a vote of confidence to its executive council, which last January expelled its president, Francis J. Gorman, who had recommended that the union affiliate again with the American Federation of Labor.

Paradoxically, this convention approved both creation and dissolution of the T. W. O. C.

A few minutes before the merger was ratified, the U. T. W. convention, first one held since 1936, adopted a resolution sanctioning a march, 1937, agreement between the executive council of the U. T. W. and the C. I. O.

Through that agreement, the CIO provided financial and other aid to set up the TWOC as a temporary measure for "building a strong union in the textile industry."

The initial organizing campaign contemplated by the agreement has been successfully completed," a joint TWOC and UTW committee reported in recommending the merger.

"The great purpose for which the Textile Workers Organizing Committee was established has been achieved.

"This does not mean that efforts to organize all textile workers who yet remain outside of our ranks will not continue to be vigorously pressed. But the time has come to consolidate the great gains of the last two years by uniting all organized textile workers in a single permanent organization."

Approximately 700 delegates attending from 32 Statets were told the TWOC roster contained 302 local unions while the UTW has 126. Membership of the TWOC was given as 250,000 and of the UTW as 75,000.

Dies Investigators to Subpena Income Returns of Radicals

Treasury Gives Committee Power to Check Data; Chairman Promises to Proceed Carefully and Act 'Judicially'

By the Associated Press.

Chairman Dies (Democrat), Texas, of the House Committee on Un-American Activities, last night said his investigators would study Federal income tax returns to determine whether certain individuals were paying taxes on money derived from Communist or Fascist activities.

Earlier in the day, the Treasury made public an executive order signed by President Roosevelt ordering the income tax files opened up to the committee's auditors. A few days ago Dies had demanded the right to examine the returns of a number of alleged Fascists and Communist leaders.

Dies Is Gratified

Dies, gratified that this power had been accorded him, said tonight it would be used with care.

"It will not be used except where we already have information and leads regarding specific individuals," he said.

In cases where the committee determined by subpenaing bank accounts and other records that persons were profiting from subversive activities, he continued, the committee would look up the income tax returns to make sure such income had been reported.

Dies was involved last summer and fall in a vehement controversy with the Administration. President Roosevelt accused the committee of receiving hearsay testimony and using improper methods in prosecuting its inquiry. Secretary Perkins and Secretary Ickes also exchanged words with the committee chairman.

The latter, at the same time, complained that the Administration had refused to give the committee assistance which the House had requested in ordering the investigation.

Promises "Judicial" Inquiry

Dies said yesterday that when hearings were resumed, they would, among other things "show that the testimony before was absolutely genuine." He realized, he added, that the committee had made "honest mistakes," but promised that future proceedings would be "dignified and judicial."

Some weeks will elapse before hearings are begun again, Dies said, as the committee investigators are engaged now in assembling facts. He expects to take the committee to many cities, including Los Angeles, Pittsburgh, New York, Chicago and Birmingham for hearings after Congress adjourns.

Quezon May Seek Second Term

Manila, May 15 (AP).—President Quezon informed the Philippine Assembly tonight he might seek a second terms if the constitution could be amended to provide a four-year presidential term, allowing one re-election.

If re-elected under such an amendment, Quezon would remain in office until 1943.

Facing Both Ways

People have become accustomed to expecting blood-and-thunder utterances from Mussolini. In consequence, remarks of his which fall short of unrestrained belligerence are greeted with relief.

That is the way the world reacted to the Duce's speech in Turin on Sunday. And the impression that Mussolini is unwilling to plunge his nation into war was not destroyed by the more truculent tone of his speech at the Fiat plant yesterday.

No one knows better than does Mussolini how reluctant the Italian people are to get involved in a major war, particularly one begun by Germany for the achievement of some German purpose. For that reason the axis has become increasingly unpopular in the peninsula and the announcement of the formal German-Italian alliance has increased misgivings. The Duce's more peaceful sentences, therefore, were obviously designed to reassure his fellow countrymen. "There are not in Europe at present," he said in his first Turin speech, "problems big enough to justify a war that by logical development would spread from Europe and become a universal event."

With the same reassuring intent he dismissed the possibility of a successful French invasion of the valley of the Po and predicted the collapse of the "system of guarantees" sponsored by Great Britain and France. And it was probably out of a similar desire to ease Italian fears that he scoffed at foreign reports that Italy's internal situation is "catastrophic."

Yet, in his speech at the Fiat plant the Duce was forced to admit that the international situation has caused Italy to "slow down" development of her civilian automobile industry. And previously he admitted that the totalitarian shoe is beginning to pinch Italy by inveighing against the democracies for the economic war which, with small justification, he says is being waged on the axis.

Recent events have revealed Fascist Italy as the prisoner of the axis, a state of affairs which the Turin speeches tend to emphasize. Knowing that the Italian people want peace and want it desperately, the Duce has found it necessary to let loose a dove or two to comfort them. Yet, at the same time, he must admit that force of circumstance has tied him, for better or worse, to Hitler's chariot and that he must go in the direction determined by Berlin.

No wonder, then, that his speeches face both ways, are peaceful and truculent by turn, with the note of proud confidence poorly disguising an inner uncertainty and a growing confusion.

Muddled Suggestions

John L. Lewis is an influential citizen as well as the head of a great labor organization. When he offers advice to Congress on a subject vitally affecting the national welfare, the public naturally expects him to speak with a sense of responsibility. It expects from him something more than the jumble of conflicting and contradictory aims set forth in his letter to Chairman Taylor of the House Appropriations Committee.

In listing five "basic points" for WPA policy Mr. Lewis requests "WPA jobs for all unemployed able and willing to work, without the degrading means test." More specifically, however, he calls for an average of 3,000,000 WPA jobs during the next year as "a minimum of safety." This seems close to an admission that under present WPA standards most of the estimated 10,000,000 currently unemployed cannot expect the relief work which he says should be available for all.

If Congress should authorize the WPA to hire applicants without regard for their economic status, as Mr. Lewis advocates, many of those in the greatest need would be left stranded. Under this plan, preference would presumably be shown on the basis of experience and efficiency. With the adoption of Mr. Lewis' fifth point—"wages sufficient to maintain an American standard of living"—these jobs would certainly become attractive to millions of individuals not now on relief. They would tend to push out the underprivileged.

There are other indications that Mr. Lewis has little interest in the relief problem as such. In addition to high Government wages for all the jobless, he asks recognition of the right of WPA workers to organize. That would give those on the rolls sufficient power to perpetuate their jobs, thus magnifying the relief problem instead of solving it.

Another demand of Mr. Lewis is that WPA jobs be "fitted to the needs and skills of unemployed workers." But in the next breath he effectively cancels this by requesting that all projects should be "socially useful and productive."

Few undertakings sponsored by the WPA can be properly classified as "productive." And it is difficult to find much social usefulness in some of its work. Certainly the objective of social usefulness should be stressed. But it is precisely the effort to fit jobs to the skills of unemployed workers which makes this difficult.

If the House committee values Mr. Lewis' advice in the formulation of a relief policy it will promptly ask him to untangle the batch of highly illogical suggestions which he has voluntarily offered.

Moral Rearmament

The walls of Madison Square Garden have echoed to many manifestations of the human spirit. But seldom, if ever, have they contained a more significant mass meeting than that which on Sunday night inaugurated there a campaign for "Moral Rearmament" in the United States.

The phrase, as is well known, originated with Dr. Frank Buchman, the leader of the Oxford Group. But no member of this group, if that word may be applied to a world-wide spiritual movement, would seek to monopolize the phrase. "Its use," to quote a recent article by David Lawrence, "is available to all who choose to see in the modern world the need for a social order in conformity with the spirit of religion."

This perception, it may be said, is scarcely a matter of choice. Whether the problem visualized be international, social or individual, there are a few controversial issues of the day which would not be rendered more malleable by resolute application of Christian doctrine on the part of all concerned. Growing appreciation of this fact gives the Moral Rearmament campaign its vitality and importance. It explains why indorsement is being received from so many in positions of leadership and responsibility. They, in particular, realize how difficult it is to resolve any clash of opinion if the elements of tolerance and good will are excluded.

The essence of Christianity, if we may judge by Christ's teachings, is that force alone is no solvent of the troubles that beset mankind. And certainly experiences with force in recent years have done nothing to discredit the validity of Christian doctrine. In all human relationships the concept of force as a means of adjustment has become increasingly prevalent in recent years. The consequent state of civilization is not encouraging.

Moral Rearmament, of course, is only a slogan. It has all the weakness, as well as all the strength, of a happy and stimulating phrase. Undoubtedly, like all good things, it may be used injuriously. It may encourage weakness where strength is demanded. It may be employed to justify the wrong rather than to fortify the right. But in spite of possible abuses it has the authentic ring. It brings home to the individual his personal responsibility in the heroic and even desperate effort to create a better-ordered world.

And the phrase is one which should have especial efficacy in a democracy. One unquestionable strength is possessed by the disciplined dictatorial party—Nazi Fascist or Communist—which controls in a totalitarian state. It makes the humblest member of that party feel himself an important element in a regenerative movement. Whether or not he is mistaken in that belief is immaterial. What counts is the conviction that his individual effort contributes to a positive, progressive and patriotic end.

This inspirational feeling is more difficult to attain in a democracy. From its very nature there is less fusion of individual endeavor and more disagreement as to objectives under this form of government. For the average citizen democracy seems a centrifugal force, whereas the social movement is strongly centripetal in the totalitarian state.

Not the least value of the Moral Rearmament movement for a democracy is the constructive emphasis which it places on the value of individual endeavor. It correctly assumes that unless the individual fortifies himself he cannot helpfully contribute to the strength of his nation and his philosophy of life. The whole is the sum of its parts and there is little hope for a civilization in which the individual is unable to face his problems with honesty, unselfishness, patience and sincerity.

As former President Hoover said, in his message to the Madison Square Garden meeting, "the world has come out of confusion before because some men and women stood solid . . . They stood firm, and they held the light of civilization until the furies passed, because they individually held to certain principles of life, of morals and spiritual values."

The Moral Rearmament campaign should help to increase the number of those who stand firm, in defense of those simple virtues on which the success of our complicated civilization increasingly depends.

Penal Reorganization

Ray L. Huff, superintendent of the District's penal institutions, says convincingly that the National Training School for Boys should be under control of the Board of Public Welfare instead of the Department of Justice. The Federal Government has no other institution of this type. Juveniles sentenced for Federal offenses in distant States are "boarded" in homes or State reformatories.

The apparent logic of the transfer suggested by Mr. Huff does not mean, however, that action should be sought at this time. Indeed, a shift in jurisdiction over the school might prove very unfortunate just now. The board of trustees has inaugurated a program of modernization at the school for which $150,000 is already included in the Department of Justice budget before the House Appropriations Committee. Considering the manner in which funds for the Board of Public Welfare are usually trimmed to a bare minimum, the best interests of the school would undoubtedly be served by leaving it temporarily in the Federal Bureau of Prisons.

As a matter of fact, any institution taken over by the District government at present is in danger of having its progress arrested. That is an unpleasant situation to contemplate. But the District might just as well face the fact that, until it can bring about a reorganization of its present ineffective governmental system, the acquisition of new responsibilities may be a mistake.

Mr. Huff appears to be chiefly interested in segregating young adult offenders from the professional criminals now incarcerated at Lorton Reformatory. That is a really urgent objective. But, in any event, it would seem a dubious move to send young men over 18 years of age to the National Training School to mingle with the juveniles. A better solution would be to seek a separate institution, probably at Lorton, for first offenders between the ages of 18 and 24.

Such a proposal, moreover, would leave the way open for closer co-ordination of the training school for boys with the industrial home schools, when and if the former institution is transferred to the District. But the key to the whole problem is reorganization of the District government. It is difficult to make any progress toward creation of a well-integrated and efficient correctional system when the municipal government itself is only a hodgepodge of loosely knit agencies.

Striking Contrasts

Secretary Hopkins has revealed that the per capita income in the District is more than double that for the United States at large and more than a third greater than the figure for the leading State, Delaware. Our income per person in 1937 was greater even than in the boom year 1929.

These figures will tend to confirm the impression of the well-nigh perfect community carried away from Washington by perhaps four visitors out of five. But the outlook for the District is not as roseate as it may appear to casual observers.

The relationship of per capita income and individual well-being is by no means constant. In computing the Department of Commerce figures only wages, dividends, rents and other cash increments are considered. Nor is any account taken of the relationship of income and living costs. Secretary Hopkins, therefore, has wisely warned against confusing per capita income and standards of living.

Certainly this warning will not be lost upon those who have been following the series of articles Eugene Pharo is writing for The Post on the basis of studies made by the Washington Council of Social Agencies. These show the District, which is so far above the national average in per capita income, to be also well above the national average in its death rate. Maternal and infant mortality here is likewise higher than the national average. So are our ratio of stillbirths and our incidence of tuberculosis. That, however, is but part of the story. The maps prepared by the council show numerous districts of the city for which the mortality and death statistics are infinitely worse than for the country in general.

No resident of Washington would discount its outward charms—the beautiful facades, the wide vistas, the unpolluted air, the abundant parks and ubiquitous shade trees. But if visitors were equally aware of the miserable slums hidden in the shadows of the public buildings, of our inadequate schools and hospitals and our cumbersome local government, any envy they might harbor would be considerably diluted.

They might even begin to wonder if the existence of such ugly evils in so beautiful a city could be due, in some part as least, to the wholly disproportionate share of the District's revenue that must go toward the maintenance of that part of Washington which is properly the concern and responsibility of the whole Nation.

Fools may learn a little in the School of Experience, but we know a number who have never been promoted to second grade.

Almost every day something new is said against civilization. Now Dorothy Dix says it is responsible for husbands being afraid of their wives.

Exchange Of Opinions

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I express to you my sincere admiration of the scholarly tact with which you conduct the exchange of opinions (I purposely avoid the term, controversy) in the column, Letters to the Editor—especially on such delicate subjects as the dogmatic and international status of the Catholic Church.

Will you allow me a short comment on the letter of Mr. Edgar E. Jones, Silver Spring, Md., of May 10?

He says, "The editorial of The Post of May 10 on "Papal Intervention" shows a superficial knowledge of Vatican politics. What the Vatican wants is greater influence in world affairs and greater power."

Of course, the Vatican, especially the last four Popes, wants greater influence and greater power, else they would be faithless to their high office and sublime call. Every man in prominent office should do it. If he acquired the power in illegitimate manner or abused his office for evil, he would deserve condemnation and contempt. But if his power is legitimately acquired and used for common good, he is to be praised and receive our thanks. That is exactly why he has been placed in his high and responsible position: to exercise the power for good and for progress which cannot be arrived at without peace.

And who, except the prejudiced and bigoted, can accuse and prove that Benedict and the last two Piuses did not exert themselves to the limits in order to secure peace or, at least, to mitigate the misfortunes and disasters of our unhappy world?

Not The Washington Post shows "a superficial knowledge of Vatican politics" but obviously Mr. Edgar Jones in his platitudinous comment on the editor's article.

"Dove-Like Welcomes"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your paper covering the Somoza reception recently and remarks regarding the W. I. L. P. F. resolution as to greeting distinguished guests in the same manner as used by military dictatorships. Perhaps even the King and Queen and our own Executive could draw crowds without such a military display.

As a suggestion, why couldn't international friendship groups parade? We have plenty of them in this country. Also it might not be amiss to attract crowds for the King and Queen by parading some of our wounded former soldiers who so valiantly fought to make the world "safe for democracy" 20 years ago.

Would you consider these "dove-like" welcomes?

MRS. LOUISE PRESTON.

Windsor's Speech

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Let me thank you for your leading editorial of May 9 entitled "Windsor's Speech."

The duke expressed nothing new; many an eyewitness to the hideous reality of war has told the same tale again and again. To whom was he speaking? Not to the multitudes who most unwillingly would be forced to do battle, but to the few leaders of great nations who for self-gratification would drench the world in blood.

While the speech itself was admirable, who is the duke to deliver such an address? After his soldiers had endured the horrors of war for four long, weary years to preserve the throne, then Windsor, as King flung away that throne for nothing but self-gratification.

England expects every man to do his duty but the former King, Edward the VIII, failed lamentably. However excellent the advice, it ill behooves the Duke of Windsor to break into the limelight now to tell other rulers their duty.

Munitions Shipments

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is taught in schools that the United States Government was set up to carry out by the will of the people. Today there appears to be a slip-up in this principle of the will of the people. With all sorts of munitions being shipped to Japan the popular resentment against these shipments is evident. In the face of popular opposition, why are these armaments shipments allowed to continue?

We talk of peace but do we act for peace? At least one bloodthirsty war could be ended by the U. S. A. The reason given for inaction is an economical one. What about the economics of war preparation? Let us weigh the cost of battleships and in the same scales weigh the profits of income from munitions. Which would top the scales? ISABEL VICKERS.

"Boring From Within"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I read with much interest Westbrook Pegler's column appearing under the title, "Treacherous Minority" in your paper May 12.

This article sounds a note which has concerned many Americans for some time. We have wondered why newspaper and magazine articles and books in which Nazis and Fascists have been attacked have received great acclaim, whereas the slightest criticism by anyone of Communists or communism has immediately brought forth tirades against the author with loud yells of "Red baiting."

All Americans must deplore any organizations, uniformed or otherwise, which are set up in our country for the purpose of causing internal dissension, class or race hatred, and regret that certain hyphenated groups have found it necessary, in their minds, to form themselves into a "quasi military" organization. However, there is much less to be feared from those organizations whose membership is easily ascertainable and who seem to be willing to admit such membership, than there is from other groups and individuals who, when called before the various investigating committees of Congress, almost without exception, decline to admit membership in the organization for which they strive so desperately by many and diverse means.

It is much more dangerous to our country to have these secret workers boring into the vitals of our Government and industry, and sowing discontent, than to have known and listed individuals joined together for propaganda purposes.

It is greatly to be hoped that the American people can be aroused at this time from their lethargy and be made to realize the serious danger to our institutions, and even to the form of government for which our forefathers sacrificed their very lives, which danger, at long last, is so clearly being brought into the open by Congressional investigations.

Of course, this should be aided by the press in a more favorable attitude toward those who in the past have been severely criticized for their attempts to call public attention to the dangers of "boring from within." It is, therefore, most gratifying to read so splendid an article as Mr. Pegler's.

ENNALLS WAGGAMAN.
Annapolis, Md., May 13.

"Threats From Within"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your editorial on "Threats From Wthin" was a timely warning to American citizens to arouse in defense of their own constitutional liberties which are being jeopardized in the proposed alien and sedition bills now pending in Congress. The fact that some of these bills have already passed the House of Representatives with overwhelming majorities adds unusual gravity to the seriousness of the situation.

There is very little difference between these alien and sedition bills now pending before Congress and the alien and sedition acts enacted into law back in John Adams' Administration when the old Whig Party was running the Government. Those acts of long ago led to very serious consequences. Under them, the freedom of the press and of speech was destroyed, freedom of assembly and the circulation of literature were put under the ban whenever it was adverse to the policies of the Whig Administration. Scores of loyal citizens were committed to prison without trial for no other offense than criticizing the policies of the governing administration.

Thomas Jefferson made the repeal of the alien and sedition acts the principal plank in his political platform upon which he was running in opposition to John Adams' re-election to the Presidency of the United States, and was elected by a landslide, and the old Whig Party was doomed forever.

Let those who are sponsoring the present un-American measures so detrimental to our constitutional liberties take warning. Under our Constitution the inalienable rights of the alien are safeguarded on the same basis as are the rights of American citizens. If Congress takes these rights away from the alien without a constitutional amendment, it not only overrides the Constitution but jeopardizes the rights of every citizen.

The Constitution expressly prohibits Congress from enacting "any law" that deprives a citizen or an alien of fundamental liberties which the Bill of Rights guarantees to all. Every American citizen should voice a vigorous protest not only against the Dempsey and Hobbs bills, which passed the House, but against a number of others of a similar nature which threaten the destruction of the Bill of Rights under our matchless Constitution.

C. S. LONGACRE.
Takoma Park, D. C., May 15.

"Pained By Pegler"

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: May I have the pain of replying to Mr. Westbrook Pegler's article, "New Deal Publicity," especially the penultimate paragraph? It is painful because it hurts to have a member of the Fourth Estate cavil at other members of the profession for the reason that they are earning their bread and butter in a manner not pleasing to Mr. Pegler, even as he is earning his meal ticket in a manner not pleasing to them.

Unfortunately many newsmen are not now employed by newspapers. "Survival of the fittest," Mr. Pegler might say. He may be right; perhaps not.

Mr. Pegler swings an acid-tipped pen. Many persons enjoy reading the product of such a pen. Hence a syndicated article. Hence columns in many newspapers, which columns of space otherwise would be filled by the products of run-o'-the-mine writers. Other columnists, for other reasons, occupy other space.

In due time the run-o'-the-mine fellows will kick the bucket or go to the poorhouse. "Fair enough," Mr. Pegler may say. "Then we shall be in heaven with a syndicated press."

Transcontinental Bus

I WONDER if it is permissible for me to add a few more words on the subject of bus travel? I have been on the short hauls and the long cross-country hauls, and to bus across the country, is, as Mr. Strickland Gillilan so aptly put it, "for the endurance," in every sense of the phrase. And much beyond.

After a manner of speaking I hold a record—perhaps not among the world's most valiant adventurers—but among people whose idea of travel is a chair car to New York in the daytime, an occasional sleeper to Chicago, the boat to Norfolk when excursion rates prevail, and possibly the bus from Washington to Baltimore.

Among such simple folk, my achievement is hair raising. Two round trips from Washington to Los Angeles without a single night's sleep at an inn or a hotel along the way; five days each way, of stiffening, groaning joints. Also five long and weary nights when no position that you can sit, curl, or half-lie in, is a good one, when every new position is a more refined torture than the last, and the skin itches, and there is no comfort anywhere. The third night on the road the body thinks (because by then the mind is dead): "Ah, this is hell at last, thank heaven."

The people one meets on the transcontinental bus—bless them—are always good-natured and excessively garrulous. The types recur from coast to coast. There are the matrons so neatly dressed, so respectable, and so friendly—it is always the first time they've ever traveled on a bus; always their private autmobiles are up for repairs, or they thought the novelty of a bus trip would be a relief after so much train travel. Or they hoped too see so much more that way. Never have they been aware that bus travel was so fatiguing and in every case their husbands were willing, until the last moment, to launch them upon some more elegant mode of travel.

Then there are the little girls, going somewhere, hopefully, to get a job. And the farmers on their way to visit their city kin, and the city kin on the way to visit the farm. And the sailor boys—by far the most delightful. They have always been away from home for years and haven't seen their moms since they enlisted; they are always incredibly young, immaculately scrubbed, and can sleep in any position. Then sometimes there are the sailors' wives, more often as murky and slatternly as the sailors are neat and well-soaped. With a couple of sorry little tots clinging to their skirts, they follow the ships from the Lakes to New Jersey, from the Gulf to the Pacific.

I accomplished those trips in two of the hottest summers I have ever lived; both of them drought years. Loyal Kansans have told me since how much better Kansas can look when there haven't been three or four droughts in a row, but my only recollection of that State is mile on mile of sunburnt fields and the bleaching bones of cattle that had perished in the drought . . . I took the Southern route, for speed, at a time when it would have been 120 degrees in the shade, and what shade is there in the Arizona desert? The cactus plant doesn't throw much of any shade to write about.

Chicago, the heart that pumps the buses through the country's arteries, Fort Wayne, St. Louis, Kansas City, Tulsa, then Dallas and Fort Worth, those deadly rivals . . . (they left me eating a sandwich in Dallas and had to phone ahead to have the bus wait for me at Fort Worth; so I gave chase, and for once in a way when I got there the courteous driver forgot his cheery smile and yapped at me).

The look of bus stations in the night when it is darkest, just before dawn, used to come back to me and haunt my dreams later. In the big stations like St. Louis and Kansas City the lights are bright and there is an unceasing hum of activity, the shouting of porters and bawling through amplifiers of arrivals and departures—but the faces of the little tired people as they stumble blindly from the buses at 3 a. m. are far more wan and eery in the hard bright lights than they look in the moonlight at a station no bigger than a lean-to in the town of Ditchwater.

You may be lucky on a trip across the country, the restaurants you stop at may happen to be good, the weather may not be extreme. You may have more time than I did and able to lie over now and then for a night's rest in a bed, but you can't escape the mountains. No traveler to Los Angeles can hope to escape the Rocky Mountains. And the funny thing is that every mountain driver I met—fine fellows all in other respects—took vast delight, as we began to climb higher and higher toward the clouds on narrow passes, pointing out spots where cars had gone over the brink, and asking if we could see the wreckage of old accidents 1,000 feet below. We could! If we happened to be crossing at night we couldn't see, but we could feel the pressure in our ears of high places and felt how much easier it would be at night to drop suddenly and quietly over the brink as we rounded a curve, and down, down, into those awesome ravines.

You may be sure that after leaving the mountains it was fun even to be in Flagstaff, or Needles, or to see approaching us once more the hot rim of the great American desert. ESTHER OBER.

Fair Enough

An Overstatement

I WANT to back up and again run over the body of President Roosevelt's contention that the radio is more truthful than the press because his boy, Elliott, a radio magnate and commentator, has come along with new evidence.

In a recent broadcast Elliott said he had been spanked by "a group of watchdogs of the public trust known to the most of us as newspaper columnists" who pictured him "as one who has run the gantlet of betrayal from a Judas Iscariot and serpent's tooth to a modern boy bandit." He added, however, that he liked columnists and "might some time join their ranks."

Now let us examine this radio comment as to accuracy.

He said he had been spanked by "a group of watchdogs," and so forth, which would mean that all such writers had taken him to task, whereas the fact is that only a minority discussed him at all. This, then, is a gross overstatement.

He said he was called a Judas, a serpent's tooth and a modern boy bandit, and, waiving the metaphor of the serpent's tooth, which might not be libelous, I will just take a chance on doubting that any newspaper writer did call him a Judas or a bandit, because those would have been poisonously libelous remarks, and no writer with any knowledge of the business would dare employ them. If a headstrong writer had tried to apply such terms to young Mr. Roosevelt he would have been checked by the copy desk or the editor, and not only for reasons or prudence but for decency as well. We don't use that sort of material in the standard American press, and the only papers which do use it are the Communist and the Nazi-Fascist sheets, which operate on the theory that nobody will sue them because nobody ever won a contest with a skunk.

Remarks Must Be Within Bounds

IF ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT means that some radical columnist of either extreme called him a Judas, or a bandit, he should have said so in the interests of truth, and if he should become a newspaper columnist himself he is likely to find that there are rules and restrictions that he never even suspected the existence of.

It is permissible, of course, to make grotesque exaggerations in some circumstances, but this in itself is an art which he obviously has not mastered. Such exaggerations must be so wrought that they cannot be taken literally, as his remarks undoubtedly were taken by many of those who heard him.

Politicians on the stump or on the air may use this style, but newspapers reporting their remarks must themselves assume legal responsibility for such matter as they reproduce in type, and therefore eliminate stuff that would be actionable. For doing this they may be accused of suppression or censorship when they are just obeying the law.

Regarded As Dirty Pool

IN THE SAME address Elliott, referring to a well-known writer, said that on a certain public occasion the water glass at the writer's place contained a colorless, transparent fluid which was not water at all. I don't know what the glass contained, and perhaps he does have information to support his plain but sly insinuation that it contained gin, but the intent here was to convey a suggestion that the writer was a drunkard, or drunk at the time in question, and although that may be fair enough on the radio it would be regarded as dirty pool in a newspaper and wouldn't make print in any respectable shop. Suppose it was gin, not water? Why mention that in view of the fact that gin is a legal beverage except to cast reflection on the mentality and character of the victim? Elliott may think that such naive cunning avoids libel, and perhaps it does on the radio, but if he should become a columnist he will soon find himself up to his eyes in libel if he attempts to use the style that is not only acceptable but rather successful in his radio work.

The President said the radio was the only means of overtaking untruths and exaggerated half-truths published in the press, and I acknowledge a small debt to his son for timely evidence that the radio is the wanton sister.

Retailers' 1938 Net Averages 4.2 Per Cent

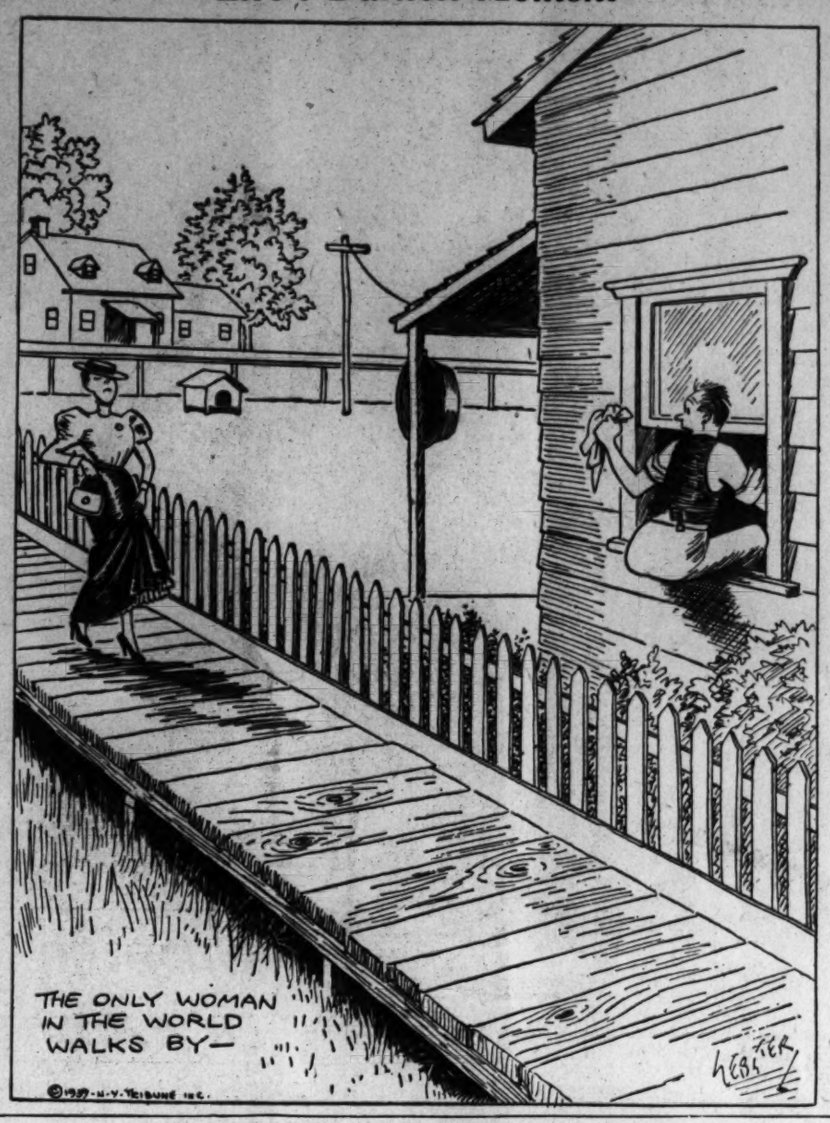
New York, May 15.—Retailers as a whole made 4.2 cents profit on every dollar of sales volume during the 1938 fiscal year, it is shown in a compilation included in the twelfth annual edition of "Fairchild's Financial Manual," being distributed today. The earnings of each dollar of sales volume totaled 5.1 cents and 5.8 cents in the 1937 and 1936 fiscal years, respectively, the table shows. Despite a decline of only 5.0 per cent in sales volume for the 1938 fiscal period, net profits were off 22.1 per cent, as compared with the preceding fiscal period. In turn, 1937 profits were off 7.0 per cent on a 6.9 per cent sales gain over 1936 figures.

Retail Advertising Gains for 3d Week

Chicago, May 15.—Retail newspaper advertising in 80 leading cities showed a gain of almost 2 per cent over the corresponding week of 1938 during the seven-day period ended May 6, Advertising Age reported today. This is the third successive week in which gains over 1938 volume have been registered.

For the week ended May 6, newspapers in the reporting cities carried a total of 22,748,542 lines of retail advertising, compared with 22,316,979 lines during the corresponding week of last year.

Life's Darkest Moment



Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

The Conflict Within The New Deal

AFTER TWO months of pulling and hauling inside the Administration, the President has disowned the Treasury's program for tax reform, and in the Department of Commerce Gen. Wood has resigned. This seems to end the most recent attempt to bring about a working arrangement between corporate business and the New Deal. Yet it is a curious thing that though these efforts always fail, they are always renewed. The record of five years shows that the issue is never settled, that while the New Deal never actually succeeds in making peace with the business community, at intervals the New Deal feels that it must open peace negotiations.

The play has now been performed so many times that the audience ought to know the scenario by heart. For it is only the actors who change. The olive branch is extended to representative businessmen by someone reputed to be the keeper of the President's conscience. Once, if I remember correctly, the name of the olive branch bearer was Hugh Johnson, then it was Joseph P. Kennedy, then it was Hopkins Hanes Morgenthau. The New Deal conciliators always emerge from the general region occupied by the Treasury, the Department of Commerce, or one of the independent agencies closely in contact with conciliatory businessmen.

Then just as the conciliatory businessmen are about to take the olive branch from the conciliatory New Dealers someone makes a speech or passes a resolution which inflames some one of the President's most cherished complexes. At that point other New Dealers, based, it is supposed, on the general area occupied by the Department of the Interior and its personal affiliates, go into action privately. The conciliators then join the army of those who went forth to battle but always fell.

2 Main Tendencies Within New Deal

WHAT CAUSES the play to be performed so often? There are some who say that it is done to mystify the public. But my belief is that there is a more genuine reason for this continual maneuvering between a settled peace and open war, these repeated essays in reconciliation followed by threats that are never carried out resolutely. The reason is that there are in fact two main tendencies inside the New Deal, and that the President is never able finally to make his choice for the one or the other.

Between the conciliatory and the irreconcilable New Dealers the crucial difference is, I think, that the one group is interested primarily in social reform and the other is interested primarily in the control of the economic system. Thus the reformers wish to provide relief, to practice conservation, to establish social security, and by law to impose social standards upon business and finance. But in order to do these things, they know that there must be money available, and so quite sincerely they would like to promote recovery, not only for its own sake, but in order to finance the reforms. When they are convinced that a certain tax is "deterrent" to enterprise and investment, they would like to modify it.

Deterrent Taxes Is Their Program

THE RADICALS on the other hand are not primarily interested in the reforms. They are primarily interested in reducing the power of corporate businessmen, and the heart of their program is not in the good works, or the public works of the New Deal, not in relief, social security, conservation, and the orderly development of natural resources. The heart of the radical program is precisely those deterrent taxes and those restrictive regulations which limit private initiative. Though they do not often avow it publicly, the radicals are opposed to a large revival of private initiative because a revival of initiative would mean a restoration of control.

It is not true, I think, that they oppose recovery as such, or that they wish the system of private enterprise to break down. But it is true that they would rather not have recovery if the revival of private initiative means a resumption of private control in the management of corporate business.

Morgenthau Belongs To Reform Type

Among the radical New Dealers the essence of the New Deal is the reduction of private corporate control by collective bargaining and labor legislation on the one side, and by restrictive, competitive and deterrent Government action on the other side. Thus they cling to taxes which do not come anywhere yielding enough revenue to balance the budget because those particular taxes paralyze the financial power of the rich and well to do.

The difference between a reformer like Secretary Morgenthau and his opponents within the Administration is at bottom that Mr. Morgenthau thinks a deterrent tax is a bad tax, whereas they think it is a good tax. It depends on what you really want. If you want to deter private initiative in industry because you are hoping to reduce the private control of industry, then a deterrent tax is just the sort of tax you want.

Radicals, Reformers Believe In Spending

THIS IS THE issue between the reformers and the radicals. Both believe in spending. But the reformers wish to spend, one because they wish to create social services and public works; two, because they wish to prime the pump for recovery. The radicals wish to spend, one, because public spending increases the power of the Government as compared with private business; two, because it makes recovery and prosperity depend on Government rather than private initiative; three, because it substitutes public investment of a proportion of the national savings for private investment; and four, because the money is spent for desirable social services.

The reformers regard the spending as an instrument of recovery and a means for improving the condition of the people. The radicals regard the spending as a substitute for recovery and as a means for altering the balance of social power.

Symbolizes Issues Dividing New Deal

THAT IS WHY the recent controversy over "tax deterrents" has been so significant. It symbolizes the issue that divides the New Deal. It is primarily a symbolic issue. For no one knows whether the Treasury's tax reforms will actually promote a substantial recovery, given the the general state of the world at the present time. But what is known is that if the President had wholeheartedly accepted that program, it would have been a pledge that the reformers rather than the radicals were predominant in the New Deal.

That pledge, whatever its immediate economic effects, would have gone a long way toward an honorable reconciliation between business and the New Deal, a reconciliation based on the acceptance by business of social reform, and by the Administration an acceptance of private initiative and private control in the management of business.

In the end either this Administration or its successor will have to make just such a reconciliation. The reforms will not be repealed; on the contrary they will be developed further. And the private control of industry, though it can be modified by law, cannot be replaced. For there is no substitute for it in any scheme of things that the American people are even remotely prepared to consider.

Dodging Tax Revision

By Mark Sullivan

After You, Gaston

President Roosevelt and his Treasury aides have at last got together with the Democratic leaders in Congress on the subject of tax revision. The "getting together," so far, is physical—they met in the same room. Whether there is a getting together in thought we will not know until we see what happens in Congress.

This latest incident is the climax in a strange series. It began February 23. First move came from Secretary Morgenthau. He publicly suggested that Congress "take a careful look at the tax laws to see if there are any deterrents holding the businessman back."

At once came assent from the Democratic leaders in Congress who have charge of tax matters, Chairman Doughton, of the House Ways and Means Committee and Chairman Harrison, of the Senate Finance Committee. Pointedly they repeated Secretary Morgenthau's word, "deterrents." They jointly wrote a letter to Secretary Morgenthau in which they asked him to give them "the views and recommendations of the Treasury Department relating to any provisions of the tax laws which, in your judgment, act as a deterrent to business."

There ensued, between the Democratic leaders in Congress and Morgenthau and other officials of the Administration, a series of gestures of the sort which American slang calls "passing the buck," which the French describe as "after you, Alphonse—no, no, after you, my dear Gaston." Both were willing, but each wanted the other to take the lead and the responsibility.

Morgenthau Fears He'll Irk President

In effect the leaders in Congress said to Morgenthau and the Administration: "You make the recommendation—tell us what taxes should be changed." In effect Morgenthau and the Administration replied: "You start it and we'll give you any information you need."

One gathered that Morgenthau and others in the Administration would be perfectly willing to make the recommendation—it is quite in accord with custom for the Treasury to do this. One gathered, indeed, that Morgenthau, and others in the Administration, were very earnest in wishing the changes, that they knew just what changes ought to be made, that they believed the changes were needeed for business recovery, and that they were earnest and anxious about helping recovery.

But one gathered that Morgenthau and the others in the Administration were a little fearful about stepping out in front. They seemed to fear President Roosevelt might not like it. Morgenthau had a habit of holding his hands over his ears, lest they be slapped down. Key man in the situation was President Roosevelt. His attitude seemed to be one of sullen coyness. One gathered that he felt the changes ought to be made; that he was, in a not very excited way, concerned about business recovery, but that he wanted the Democratic leaders in Congress to propose the changes and take the responsibility.

Congress' Leaders Irritated By Speech

As the situation developed and pressure for revision became acute, Mr. Roosevelt became more resistant. He brought forward objections. He got to the point, last week, of saying in a press conference that there is no such thing as a "deterrent tax"—that no one tax is more deterrent than any other. On this point Mr. Roosevelt ought to consult his Treasury officials. I think it was the Treasury that first used the term "deterrent tax"—certainly Morgenthau used it on February 23.

An equivalent term, "friction taxes," also came out of the Treasury. Anyhow, expert opinion is just about unanimous that certain taxes put brakes on business. These taxes deter business as business would not be deterred by taking the same amount of money through ordinary taxes.

Back of the whole situation, is a bit of history. A year ago, the Democratic leaders in Congress put through a partial tax revision, which somewhat reduced two of the taxes now in discussion, the capital gains tax and the undistributed surplus tax. This Mr. Roosevelt did not like. He refused to sign the bill, letting it become law by passage of the statutory ten days—the first and only time Mr. Roosevelt has taken this course. He made a speech condemning the reduction in these two taxes.

This, in turn, irritated the Democratic leaders in Congress. Senator Harrison publicly "talked back" at the President.

So, Who Is Going To Eat Words Now?

From that incident some of the present situation arises. If Mr. Roosevelt were now to initiate and take responsibility for further reducing these two and other deterrent taxes, he would seem to be going back on what he strongly said a year ago.

At the same time there is, perhaps, on the part of the Democratic leaders in Congress, a little harmless malice. If they can so maneuver as to make Mr. Roosevelt or his Secretary of the Treasury take responsibility for initiating the tax reductions, they will be making the President eat his words of a year ago. And Mr. Roosevelt is not a man to swallow gracefully a meal of his own words. Further, these taxes, or resistance to reducing these taxes, has considerable demagogue value. The taxes come largely from rich individuals and corporations, but have a powerful effect in deterring all business, big and little, and all employment.

When Mussolini Talks Peace

WHEN THE JAPANESE insist that their sole object in waging war on China is to get the Chinese to "co-operate" with them, the world dismisses this assertion as so patently absurd as not to be worth a moment's consideration. Yet when Hitler and Mussolini say they are for "peace" there are many in this country and elsewhere prepared to believe that they mean it.

Of course they mean it. And so do the Japanese when they insist that the real goal of their policy is Sino-Japanese "co-operation." What we forget or ignore, however, is that Hitler, Mussolini and the Japanese leaders frequently use words in a sense fantastically different from the meaning attached to the same words in other countries.

WHAT THE Japanese mean by "co-operation" is, obviously, something quite other than what the Chinese understand that term to mean. It is conceivable that given a readiness by Japan to respect China's independence and sovereignty, Sino-Japanese co-operation might become a realty.

But that isn't what Japan wants. She wants China to co-operate in the sense that Manchukuo "co-operates." In other words, she wants China to permit Japan to dominate her political life and direct her economic development. Rather than allow this, however, China is prepared to continue fighting at no matter what cost.

Hitler and Mussolini also have a fairly specific idea as to what they mean by the term "peace," and there isn't any doubt that if the world accepts their definition as a valid program of action there would be no war, at least no war on a large scale. But, as it happens, their definition of "peace" is utterly at variance with the way that term is understood in most parts of the world.

MUSSOLINI'S Turin speech of last Sunday is an interesting object lesson in this use—or misuse—of common words. That speech was regarded in Paris and London as, on the whole, a peaceful one. It was so regarded because, at one point, the Duce said:

"There are not at present in Europe problems big enough or acute enough to justify a war that by logical development would spread from Europe and become a universal event."

What does this mean? To Great Britain and France that meant, or appeared to mean, that Mussolini didn't think Danzig worth a general war. And there is no reason to believe that that isn't exactly what the Duce did mean. But while the British and the French may think the remark is a hint to Hitler to go slowly it is equally possible that Mussolini is only suggesting why Great Britain and France should not court a general war by defending the present status in Danzig when they refused to take a similar position in defense of Czecho-Slovakia.

"THERE ARE KNOTS in European politics," Mussolini went on to say," but recourse to the sword is, perhaps, not necessary to cut them." Recourse to the sword was he might have added, not necessary in the case of the Czecho - Slovakia knot which, after being cut was destroyed.

In other words Mussolini's definition of peace is a state of affairs in which the demands of the axis powers are met without resistance by the nation or nations upon whom the demands are made. That is Hitler's definition as well.

IT FOLLOWS naturally, therefore, that in the minds of the dictators, the burden of preserving peace rests not with the totalitarian powers but with the nations lined up against them. And, in so far as the latter are now reluctant to give way to the demands of the axis, those powers are in Hitler's and Mussolini's eyes "aggressive."

THEY ARE aggressive to the point of waging a "white war," Mussolini insists, when they try to prevent the totalitarian states from extending the area of autarchy and thus limiting the area of free international trade. They are aggressive when they give each other guarantees of mutual support against possible attack, as Great Britain and Poland have done. They are aggressive when they use their wealth to bolster up the economic systems of nations under pressure from the axis to accept economic domination.

By accepting his definition of what "peace" means, the world can understand why, in his Turin speech, Mussolini told his people that the reason why Italy is arming to the hilt is "to be ready always to safeguard our peace and to repulse any threatened aggression at any moment."

By definition, therefore—Mussolini's definition—Italy and Germany are peaceful states because they are prepared to achieve their ambitions through the capitulation of those who stand in their path, and Great Britain and France are warlike states because they are opposing such a "peaceful" course.

No wonder, then, that the speeches of the dictators have less and less meaning and why it is necessary to pay far more attention to their actions than to their words.

Cotton Consumption

The Census Bureau reported yestreday that cotton consumed during April totaled 546,702 bales of lint and 69,147 of linters, compared with 649,237 of lint and 73,769 of linters during March this year, and 413,169 of lint and 57,475 of linters during April last year.

Lumber Shipments 68 Per Cent of 1929

The lumber industry during the week ended May 6 stood at 70 per cent of the 1929 weekly average of production and 68 per cent of average 1929 shipments. Production was about 70 per cent of the corresponding week of 1929; shipments, about 62 per cent of that week's shipments; new orders about 70 per cent of that week's orders, according to reports to the National Lumbering Manufacturers Association from regional associations covering the operations of important softwood and hardwood mills.

Reported new orders were 6 per cent below the preceding week and shipments were 8 per cent below. The preceding week was highest in 1939 in both new business and shipments.

Passing Of The Circus Horse

("The circus has abandoned draft horses. Motor trucks, tractors and elephants now do the job."—News item.)

No more horses haulin' wagons—
No more sweatin' bays and blacks
Helpin' cart the circus safely
To the big lot from the tracks?

No more harness chains a-jangl'in'—
No more crackin' of the whips
O'er the back of wondrous horse teams
As the big show made its trips?

No more sound of hoofs on pavements—
No more squishing through the muck—
No more "Ya thar!" from the driver
High upon the big red truck?

No more gleamin' hides a-steamin'
On the journey to the lot,
As the sturdy six-horse hitches
Strained and labored, wet and hot?

No more horse tent where the big ones,
Strong and handsome, hides aglow,
Could be seen by folks who sort of
Liked fine horseflesh with the show?

No more "Majors," "Bens" and "Dollies"—
No more "Princes," "Babes" and Bills"
Answerin' their drivers' urgin's
As they plodded up the hills?

No more neighin's in the daybreak
Near each wagon, cage and cart
From the big deep-chested fellows
Who were long the big show's heart?

No more waitin' at the depot,
As first daylight softly steals,
For the finest bunch of hosses
And the creak of wagon wheels?

No more plumes and studded harness
In the circus grand parade,
As the horses of the big top
Hauled the "hippo" up the grade?

No more acres of tall horse tents
With the scent of straw and hay,
And what seemed a million horses,
Sorrel, chestnut, white and gray?

No more magic nights of boyhood—
No more lingerin' around
Drinkin' in the wondrous music
As a circus left the ground?

Just a medley, now, of motors—
Just a grindin' of hot gears—
Just a noise of shriekin' sirens
As the circus packs and clears.

Just a smell of oils and gases
As the truck wheels roar and skid . . .
It's efficiency and progress
But, say, you can have it, kid!

U. S. Gives Hose Hints In Guide

Home Economics Bureau Issues Rules for Care Of Stockings

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THIS is the time of year when a young maid's fancy turns to cool sheers and flattering summer straws. Only too casually does she look to her legs and feet. The procedure might be reversed, for not since World War days have skirts been so short.

At present the girl with beautiful legs is willing to wear her skirts higher than even the Paris approved maxim of 17 or 18 inches. Appropriately and becomingly shod legs now can lend enchantment to your entire ensemble or can stamp you as definitely dowdy, and ill-informed about current hosiery fashions.

Uncle Sam Suggests

The Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture is one organization mindful of the importance of hosiery in the summer style scheme. After an exhaustive study of hosiery ills and how to doctor them, the Bureau has just published a "Hosiery Guide for Women." Here are the 10 chief points to consider in selecting hosiery, as given by the guide.

"FIBER—Cotton, rayon, wool, silk or a mixture can be selected, depending on the wearing needs for service.

"WEIGHT—Decide whether the hose are to be used for hard, moderate or light wear, or for appearance only.

"TEXTURE—Are the yarns tightly twisted and the fabric closely knitted so that the hose will be resistant to snagging?

"CONSTRUCTION—Are the hose properly shaped in the knitting so that they will fit permanently, or are they tubular knit and shaped by stretching?

"ELASTICITY—Do the ankle and welt stretch easily and go back into shape?

"REINFORCEMENTS—Are the foot and welt durably but not too heavily reinforced

"SIZE—Is the hose size one-half inch more than the length of the wearer's foot? Are the hose the right length in the leg?

"SPECIAL FIT—Would outsizes, two-way stretch tops, narrow heels or other special features give better fit than regular sizes?

"APPEARANCE — Are there yarn imperfections, rings or up and down stripes?

That Old Riddle

Answer yourself all these questions and then suit the hose to the occasion by wearing cotton, silk or rayon for general wear; cotton, wool and service-weight silk for sports and hard wear. The Department of Agriculture even suggests cotton in novelty knits for evening wear, if lightweight silks and quality rayons are out of one's financial reach.

A present day riddle almost as ambient as that of the Sphinx is "Why do my hose wear out? Why must those runs and holes happen to me?" One of the reasons hose wear out, according to the Bureau, is because the weight selected is not suitable for their use. Long service should not be expected from general wear hose. Mesh hose need durable reinforcements at toe and heels, otherwise holes and runs soon appear. Other causes are rough and calloused heels or feet, prominent foot bones, rough places or tacks in shoes, worn or rough shoe linings, loose fitting heels that rub, too long toenails, too short shoes and hose, and too little reinforcement in the hose.

Suit the Hose to the Occasion

Mrs. DeGoofey versus Senator Tweet

A DRAMATIC PLEA for the installation of full-length triple mirrors in all elevators was made yesterday before the Senate Committee for Public Meddling by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, president and founder of the Do Something About It League. Mrs. DeGoofey was before the committee for two hours reading her 100-page statement. Her testimony was marked by several altercations with her old enemy, Senator Tweet, who attempted to show that the famous reformer was in the employ of the Lastex government.

Mrs. De Goofey

"Is it true, Mrs. DeGoofey," asked Senator Tweet, that at one time you were a member of a Christian Endeavor Society at Utopia, Nebr.?"

"No, it was an Epworth League," was the reply. "I served as treasurer for six months."

"What did you do with the money?" thundered Senator Tweet.

"The distinguished Senator should be able to answer that question out of his own experience," was the reply.

Foul Play Is Suspected

In her statement Mrs. DeGoofey charged that "subversive influences" had been responsible for the gradual disappearance of mirrors from elevators. "Formerly," she declared, "any American wife or mother on entering an elevator could adjust her hat and powder her nose. Now what happens? You board an elevator tired, frowsy, perhaps with your slip showing. You look around hopefully for a mirror. Nothing but steel bars or chromium walls confront you. Why, I ask you, have we permitted such a curtailment of our personal liberty?

"Gentlemen, I unhesitatingly assert—pardon me, am I going too fast for the press reporters? . . . All right, I unhesitatingly assert—pardon me, but would you photographers like a profile view also? . . . All right then, just a minute . . .

"Now then, may I say that I unhesitatingly assert that in this momentous issue the voice of the people should be heard? I am convinced that the founding fathers fully intended there should be mirrors in all elevators in this fair land of ours."

"Have you any statement from George Washington on that point, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked Senator Flagg.

"No, but I expect to dig up one before I am through."

"Do you think, Mrs. DeGoofey, that the predatory interests might have had a hand in bringing about this situation?" asked Senator Chinn.

"Possibly, though I am more inclined to suspect the Nazis or Communists."

Hitler Might Not Like It

At that point Senator Flagg leaped to his feet. "Well then, if we put mirrors in elevators," he exclaimed, "might it not lead to foreign entanglements?"

"No. On the contrary, it would make our own women more attractive—and keep our men off foreign soil," replied Mrs. DeGoofey.

"Have you encountered any opposition to this proposal?" asked Senator Chinn.

"Oh, a little—from a few crackpots," was the reply.

"What is your definition of a crackpot?" broke in Senator Tweet.

"The same as yours—'anybody who disagrees with me' . . . Now, to resume my statement, may I say that the founding fathers—pardon me, would you photographers like for me to face the light? . . . All right then. Now, gentlemen, may I say that the issue is one of Americanism—"

"How do you define Americanism?" interrupted Senator Chinn.

"Americanism is the way this country ought to be run," said Mrs. DeGoofey.

"Well, this whole thing sounds to me like class legislation," declaimed Senator Tweet. "Why should we send our boys abroad to fight to protect the vanity of American women—"

"Who said women?" broke in Mrs. DeGoofey. "Senator Tweet, if you yourself had looked in an elevator mirror before coming to this hearing there might be less dandruff on your coat collar—"

At that point the chairman announced adjournment of the hearing.

He tells me point-blank that he doesn't love me and doesn't want me to fall in love with him—because he likes me too much to hurt me. It seems that he had an unhappy love affair a couple of years ago, when he was an interne, and believes he never will love again. Don't you think he will? I have never told him how deeply I care for him, but I can scarcely resist when we are together. It just seems natural to say I love him. He is extremely nice and thoughtful and I really would think he loved me but for the fact that he consistently reminds me that he doesn't. I just can't understand him.

He has all the qualities that I have ever dreamed of in a husband, but he just seems so determined not to fall in love with me. Yet that is what I want more than anything on earth, and I would do anything in my power to make him happy and further his advancement. Don't you think he might fall in love with me? We have known each other for about eight months, although we have only been dating about half that time, seeing each other several times a week.

Please tell me if there is anything I can do to make him love me. If I could just hear him say, "I love you," I would be in Paradise. Should I tell him that I love him already (that it's too late for him to warn me against it?) or just take a chance that one of Cupid's darts will hit him? I'm losing weight over him, regardless of all his pills. There is nothing wrong with me—morally, physically or otherwise—that I know of, that could make him so obstinately set against me. I think he should just wait and let Nature take its course, without declaring himself so pointedly. Your suggestions will be appreciated.

PERPLEXED.

Ace Cards Forfeited

DEAR PERPLEXED: When a sentimental relationship between a man and a maid is conducted in a seemly manner, usually there is no occasion for the man to make an obstinately repetitious point of the fact that he does not love, and never expects to love, the lady in the case. Offhand, I can think of only two sets of circumstances which might give rise to such a statement of attitude: one, a relationship in which an insufferably conceited prig of a man, of the stuffed-shirt variety, was furtively patronizing a woman whom he considered his social inferior; and, two, a relationship in which the man had taken the girl as his mistress, while making it unmistakably clear, from the outset, that his intentions were neither serious nor honorable, and that their alliance was devoid of any elements of permanency.

I venture to think that the latter hypothesis affords a thumbnail definition of your predicament. There is more reason to think so, in view of your extravagant protestations of passionate devotion, which tally with the well-known fact that the more fully a woman gives herself to a man, the more she comes to care for him; whereas the more completely (yet subtly) she holds herself aloof, the more the man learns to care for her.

I could, of course, be wrong in this surmise; and am given some pause by your avowal that "there is nothing wrong with you, morally, that could make him so obstinately set against you"—but I also recognize the fact that few persons, if any, are able and willing to tell the truth, the whole truth and nothing but the truth about themselves, when asking for advice.

However, let's assume, for purposes of discussion, that you have consistently observed the moral proprieties in this relationship. What, then, is the logical explanation of your hopelessly disadvantageous position? Why is the man so resistant to the idea of falling in love? It may be because you jumped the gun by falling head over heels—and unmistakably!—in love with him almost simultaneously with his first profession of friendship, thus disconcertingly placing him on the defensive with regard to an issue that seemed to require immediate clarification.

Perhaps your actions were so eloquent of adoration as to put him in a position where he felt called upon to declare his stand, as of the moment; and that, not being in love with you as yet, he honestly said as much. Once a man has made this chill admission to a lady who transparently (and gratuitously) loves him to distraction, the chances are practically nil of his ever doing an emotional handspring back into the position of ardent admirer. Once a woman concedes a man the privilege of seeing her on his own terms—when, as and if it suits his sovereign pleasure—she has pretty well forfeited whatever winning cards may previously have been hers.

Nothing more effectively wet-blankets a man's nascent romantic ardor than the realization that a woman is his for the asking—before he has fully made up his mind that he wants her. He resents the implication, tacitly conveyed, that he has an obligation in conscience to return her love in full measure. This may be the explanation of your friend's attitude at present. He may be, both instinctively and rather helplessly, in retreat before your obvious (if unspoken) expectations; whereas, had he been confronted with a different preliminary approach on your part, he might have become a suitor to fulfill your fondest hopes.

I am sorry to say that I haven't a single recommendation to offer, such as might turn the tide in your favor. I think you have already lost the prize, in the first rounds of play. I think it is now a matter, merely, of playing the game through to its logical conclusions, with you the loser; or of conceding your opponent the game and consoling yourself as best you can. I think you have let yourself in for an interlude of heartbreak that is an almost universal portion of human experience, and that you have no choice but to live through it, taking your percentage of wisdom from it, and employing that wisdom as a shield for your heart in the future. In other words, I think that no matter what you did now, you couldn't reverse the man's outspoken attitude, and I believe that the sooner you reconcile yourself to the fact, the sooner will your frantic inner turmoil subside.

Your Figure Madam

By Ida Jean Kain.

Reduction of 3 Inches From Waist, 2 From Hips Possible by July 4

HOW WOULD you like to lose 15 pounds between now and the Fourth of July—the open season on bathing suits?

Fifteen pounds will seem like quite an alteration if it represents most of your excess weight. But no matter how you look at it, that many pounds off will enable you to don at least one size smaller suit.

What will make you feel like showing off, however, will be the measurable improvement made in your figure through exercise. In that comparatively short span of time you can take a good 3 inches off the waist and 2 off the hips. And you can do it! Why, we know a movie star who took 3 inches off her hips in two weeks!

Slimmer Lines

Here is an exercise of the type that will help you to slim down in the right spots.

Lie on the back on the floor with the arms stretched out at the sides, shoulder level and the legs straight down on the floor. Keep the shoulders and left leg flat on the floor as you flex the right knee and swing it over to touch the floor beyond the left leg. Return to position, relax and swing the left leg over the right, knee pointed Exercise is not reducing in the sense that it takes much weight off. It tightens the musculature, giving you more compact and slimmer lines. Therefore, it plays a very important part in reducing the number of inches in a measurement.

For the reduction of weight, there is no substitute for a good balanced diet. You can, if you like, plan your own menus, always being sure that all the food essentials are included.

Have daily: One liberal serving or two smaller portions of lean meat, two cups of vegetables, one egg, two glasses of skim milk or buttermilk or a serving of cottage cheese instead of one of the glasses of milk; two fresh fruits, three slices of whole grain bread and three pats of butter each one-fourth inch thick.

Lose 2 Pounds a Week

That little list constitutes around 1,100 calories, and on it you can lose an average of 2 pounds a week.

Since the fats and grains are necessarily cut down to the minimum to make you lose, vitamin concentrates should be used. If the milk or cheese are omitted, you might also use a mineral concentrate.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, May 15.

IN NO TIME at all, June brides will be exploding all around us, and it behooves us to take a quick look around the local bride shoppeys to see what the young lady may be wearing as she matches step with the band and starts on the fateful march up The Last Long Mile. After studying this situation for the last week, I've come to the conclusion that it will be a tough June to get wedded for the big husky girl who was a hockey star in school.

For the truth is that the little girl style-trend has now inched its way into the wedding rigouts, and the daintier the victim, the prettier she'll look as she faces the clergyman. I never saw such girly, fussy bridal finery. You can get a nice formal satin gown of the old school, if you want it, but the accent right now seems to be on sheer materials, with various types of net leading the parade. We local girls agree that the prettiest of the bridal goods of 1939 is embroidered Swiss organdy. It is also extremely popular with the brides-to-be.

Ruffles and streamers and countless yards of lace trimming will deck out these nuptial frockies, and many of the more fragile and girlish brides will look like the star of a Shirley Temple picture. And very nice, too.

In general the skirts will be pretty full (though not as full as the best man at the wedding breakfast). Bodices will be tight (but not as tight as the ushers). Necks will be high this summer (but not as high as the bride's papa after the ceremony). So all in all the bridal month looks like a field day for the daintier type of our young womanhood. The active sportswomen who were "head of the games" at school, and whose muscles bulge here and there, can fall back on the dear old satin—or else be spliced in the going-away duds.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Even though our little fair is still very young, the cameramen on duty are running thin. Already they are repeating two pictures day after day. (1) A row of pretty girls sitting on a bench with their shoes off, trying to quiet the barking dawgs. (2) A little boy and a little girl gnawing hot dogs as they peer up the Needle, or Trylon. Come on, boys, get your second wind and forget the babes with the shoes off!

WE GET photographic glimpses of Peggy Hopkins Joyce, etc., soaking up sun down at the old family place at Farmville, Va. Seems to me that Peg is at last beginning to ease up a bit, for certainly the pictures show signs of one chin too many. But shucks, we can't go on forever and ever, can we, Peg?

U. S. Gives Hose Hints In Guide

Home Economics Bureau Issues Rules for Care Of Stockings

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor.

THIS is the time of year when a young maid's fancy turns to cool sheers and flattering summer straws. Only too casually does she look to her legs and feet. The procedure might be reversed, for not since World War days have skirts been so short.

At present the girl with beautiful legs is willing to wear her skirts higher than even the Paris approved maxim of 17 or 18 inches. Appropriately and becomingly shod legs now can lend enchantment to your entire ensemble or can stamp you as definitely dowdy, and ill-informed about current hosiery fashions.

Uncle Sam Suggests

The Bureau of Home Economics of the United States Department of Agriculture is one organization mindful of the importance of hosiery in the summer style scheme. After an exhaustive study of hosiery ills and how to doctor them, the Bureau has just published a "Hosiery Guide for Women." Here are the 10 chief points to consider in selecting hosiery, as given by the guide.

"FIBER—Cotton, rayon, wool, silk or a mixture can be selected, depending on the wearing needs for service.

"WEIGHT—Decide whether the hose are to be used for hard, moderate or light wear, or for appearance only.

"TEXTURE—Are the yarns tightly twisted and the fabric closely knitted so that the hose will be resistant to snagging?

"CONSTRUCTION—Are the hose properly shaped in the knitting so that they will fit permanently, or are they tubular knit and shaped by stretching?

"ELASTICITY—Do the ankle and welt stretch easily and go back into shape?

"REINFORCEMENTS—Are the foot and welt durably but not too heavily reinforced

"SIZE—Is the hose size one-half inch more than the length of the wearer's foot? Are the hose the right length in the leg?

"SPECIAL FIT—Would outsizes, two-way stretch tops, narrow heels or other special features give better fit than regular sizes?

"APPEARANCE — Are there yarn imperfections, rings or up and down stripes?

That Old Riddle

Answer yourself all these questions and then suit the hose to the occasion by wearing cotton, silk or rayon for general wear; cotton, wool and service-weight silk for sports and hard wear. The Department of Agriculture even suggests cotton in novelty knits for evening wear, if lightweight silks and quality rayons are out of one's financial reach.

A present day riddle almost as ancient as that of the Sphinx is "Why do my hose wear out? Why must those runs and holes happen to me?" One of the reasons hose wear out, according to the Bureau, is because the weight selected is not suitable for their use. Long service should not be expected from general wear hose. Mesh hose need durable reinforcements at toe and heels, otherwise holes and runs soon appear. Other causes are rough and calloused heels or feet, prominent foot bones, rough places or tacks in shoes, worn or rough shoe linings, loose fitting heels that rub, too long toenails, too short shoes and hose, and too little reinforcement in the hose.

Mrs. DeGoofey versus Senator Tweet

A DRAMATIC PLEA for the installation of full-length triple mirrors in all elevators was made yesterday before the Senate Committee for Public Meddling by Mrs. Henrietta DeGoofey, president and founder of the Do Something About It League. Mrs. DeGoofey was before the committee for two hours reading her 100-page statement. Her testimony was marked by several altercations with her old enemy, Senator Tweet, who attempted to show that the famous reformer was in the employ of the Lastex government.

Mrs. De Goofey

"Is it true, Mrs. DeGoofey," asked Senator Tweet, that at one time you were a member of a Christian Endeavor Society at Utopia, Nebr.?"

"No, it was an Epworth League," was the reply. "I served as treasurer for six months."

"What did you do with the money?" thundered Senator Tweet.

"The distinguished Senator should be able to answer that question out of his own experience," was the reply.

Foul Play Is Suspected

In her statement Mrs. DeGoofey charged that "subversive influences" had been responsible for the gradual disappearance of mirrors from elevators. "Formerly," she declared, "any American wife or mother on entering an elevator could adjust her hat and powder her nose. Now what happens? You board an elevator tired, frowsy, perhaps with your slip showing. You look around hopefully for a mirror. Nothing but steel bars or chromium walls confront you. Why, I ask you, have we permitted such a curtailment of our personal liberty?

"Gentlemen, I unhesitatingly assert—pardon me, am I going too fast for the press reporters? . . . All right, I unhesitatingly assert—pardon me, but would you photographers like a profile view also? . . . All right then, just a minute . . .

"Now then, may I say that I unhesitatingly assert that in this momentous issue the voice of the people should be heard? I am convinced that the founding fathers fully intended there should be mirrors in all elevators in this fair land of ours."

"Have you any statement from George Washington on that point, Mrs. DeGoofey?" asked Senator Flagg.

"No, but I expect to dig up one before I am through."

"Do you think, Mrs. DeGoofey, that the predatory interests might have had a hand in bringing about this situation?" asked Senator Chinn.

Hitler Might Not Like It

At that point Senator Flagg leaped to his feet. "Well then, if we put mirrors in elevators," he exclaimed, "might it not lead to foreign entanglements?"

"No. On the contrary, it would make our own women more attractive—and keep our men off foreign soil," replied Mrs. DeGoofey.

"Have you encountered any opposition to this proposal?" asked Senator Chinn.

"Oh, a little—from a few crackpots," was the reply.

"What is your definition of a crackpot?" broke in Senator Tweet.

"The same as yours—'anybody who disagrees with me' . . . Now, to resume my statement, may I say that the founding fathers—pardon me, would you photographers like for me to face the light? . . . All right then. Now, gentlemen, may I say that the issue is one of Americanism—"

"How do you define Americanism?" interrupted Senator Chinn.

"Americanism is the way this country ought to be run," said Mrs. DeGoofey.

"Well, this whole thing sounds to me like class legislation," declaimed Senator Tweet. "Why should we send our boys abroad to fight to protect the vanity of American women—"

"Who said women?" broke in Mrs. DeGoofey. "Senator Tweet, if you yourself had looked in an elevator mirror before coming to this hearing there might be less dandruff on your coat collar—"

At that point the chairman announced adjournment of the hearing.

Chowder a Meal If It's Built Up With Accessories

By Martha Ellyn

SOUP isn't always just the beginning to a meal, especially when it's a chowder—it is the meal. Build up the menu with plenty of accessories. Fish and clam chowders seem to be the popular one, but a piping hot corn chowder isn't to be neglected.

A Woman's New York

By Alice Hughes

New York, May 15.

IN NO TIME at all, June brides will be exploding all around us, and it behooves us to take a quick look around the local bride shoppeys to see what the young lady may be wearing as she matches step with the band and starts on the fateful march up The Last Long Mile. After studying this situation for the last week, I've come to the conclusion that it will be a tough June to get wedded for the big husky girl who was a hockey star in school.

For the truth is that the little girl style-trend has now inched its way into the wedding rigouts, and the daintier the victim, the prettier she'll look as she faces the clergyman. I never saw such girly, fussy bridal finery. You can get a nice formal satin gown of the old school, if you want it, but the accent right now seems to be on sheer materials, with various types of net leading the parade. We local girls agree that the prettiest of the bridal goods of 1939 is embroidered Swiss organdy. It is also extremely popular with the brides-to-be.

Ruffles and streamers and countless yards of lace trimming will deck out these nuptial frockies, and many of the more fragile and girlish brides will look like the star of a Shirley Temple picture. And very nice, too.

In general the skirts will be pretty full (though not as full as the best man at the wedding breakfast). Bodices will be tight (but not as tight as the ushers). Necks will be high this summer (but not as high as the bride's papa after the ceremony). So all in all the bridal month looks like a field day for the daintier type of our young womanhood. The active sportswomen who were "head of the games" at school, and whose muscles bulge here and there, can fall back on the dear old satin—or else be spliced in the going-away duds.

GIRL ABOUT TOWN—Even though our little fair is still very young, the cameramen on duty are running thin. Already they are repeating two pictures day after day. (1) A row of pretty girls sitting on a bench with their shoes off, trying to quiet the barking dawgs. (2) A little boy and a little girl gnawing hot dogs as they peer up the Needle, or Trylon. Come on, boys, get your second wind and forget the babes with the shoes off!

WE GET photographic glimpses of Peggy Hopkins Joyce, etc., soaking up sun down at the old family place at Farmville, Va. Seems to me that Peg is at last beginning to ease up a bit, for certainly the pictures show signs of one chin too many. But shucks, we can't go on forever and ever, can we, Peg?

Commencement
. . . to long lived loveliness

Commencement, 1939 . . . can be more than the completion of an academic course. For many it will be the first occasion for wearing an Erlebacher gown.

And so this delightful new distinction may live beyond a memorable moment. Erlebacher commencement dresses in white or pastels are styles to be wearable for subsequent summer affairs.

Minister of Latvia Is Host at Reception

Diplomatic, Official, Residential Society Helps Celebrate Regeneration of Republic; Admiral Bristol's Death Mourned by Many

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

CELEBRATING the regeneration of the Latvian Republic, the Minister of Latvia and Mme. Bilmanis entertained yesterday at a large reception at the Legation, 1715 Twenty-second street. Diplomatic, official and residential society turned out in droves between 5 and 7 o'clock to attend the party, the largest on yesterday's calendar.

Shortly after 5 o'clock, the big rooms of the legation began to fill with official and social celebrities, and half an hour later there was a mammoth crowd in both the drawing room and the dining room, where champagne and other drinks were served. A long table, decorated with a huge bouquet of mixed spring flowers in a Dresden vase, flanked by two matching candelabra, was lavishly laden with the usual tea-time dainties, plus a few special dishes found only at the Latvian Legation.

The host and hostess received in the richly furnished drawing room, where countless objets d'art are on view and where a museum could be set up at a moment's notice. Mr. Bilmanis is a discriminating collector, and the legation is a veritable storehouse ceramics, French marquetry consoles and cabinets, paintings of the old masters, and Galet glass—to say nothing of clocks here, there and everywhere.

MME. BILMANIS, who generally dresses in native costume for patriotic receptions at the Legation, yesterday was trimly turned out in a fashionable frock of delphinium crepe, fashioned on flowing lines with short sleeves and a square neckline. In a prominent place, within view of the host and hostess, however, there was a life-size figure, dressed from head to foot in native costume, lending an authentic touch of Latvian atmosphere.

Mme Smits, wife of the Secretary of the Legation, assisted in the dining room and was an attractive figure in a dark blue semi-tailored frock that contrasted nicely with her blond hair.

Almost every embassy and legation was represented in the scores of guests who called before the party was over. Official and residential circles were also noted in numbers.

PRESENT: The Ambassador of Turkey and Mme. Ertegun, who recently returned from New York, were enthusiastic in their praises of the World's Fair . . . Also, paying tribute to the exposition was the Greek Minister, Demetrios Sicilianos, who says he hopes to spend much more time at it in the next few weeks . . . Mme. Hurban chatting with Mrs. Stanley K. Hornbeck . . . the Portuguese Minister and Mme. Bianchi seen in the crowd, she wearing a handsome black and white ensemble. . . . Across the room, Miss Sibilla Skidelsky, chatting with first one friend and then another, and looking very much like a small girl in her full-skirted frock and Breton sailor tilted on the back of her head.

MANY IN TH ECROWD had attended Admiral Mark Bristol's funeral earlier in the afternoon, and in any group in which you found yourself his passing was mentioned. Truth is, his death has spread a pall over Washington in general and Washington society in particular. One of the most popular men ever to live here, Admiral Bristol and his wife have long been inveterate party-goers and always had a cluster of friends around them from the minute they arrived until they left.

His passing leaves a gap, a big one that will not soon be filled, in a number of Capital circles. His cherry greetings, gayly phrased pleasantries and pithy remarks will be missed by both those who knew him well and those whom he hailed only in passing.

At the hour set for his final rites yesterday, all shades and degrees of Washington society were on hand to pay tribute to him and to voice their sympathy to Mrs. Bristol, widow of a courageous Admiral embarking on his final voyage.

Also there, the new Soviet Ambassador and Mme. Oumansky; the Naval Attache of the Iralian Embassy, the Marquis of Sant'-Orsola; the Yugoslav Minister and Mme Fotitch, and Mr. and Mrs. Harry Grant Meem, the latter wearing one of the handsomest ensembles there, a purple frock and matching hat, set off with a white veil, and a silver fox neckpiece.

MRS. CHARLES B. DRAKE and her daughter, Miss Barrine Drake, were seen in the crowd; also, Miss Helen Patten, Clarence Hewes, Mrs. Thomas Cowell, Mr. and Mrs. Emil Hurja, Mr. and Mrs. H. Charles Spruks, Mr. and Thomas Burke, and V. Valta Parma, head of the rare book room, Library of Congress, who who was accompanied by Mrs. Parma.

Very much a center of attention was the Minister of Denmark, Otto Wadsted, who recently concluded his tour with royalty from his country and who yesterday described the whole six weeks as "pleasant from beginning to end." Still others there—to mention but a few—were Mrs. William D. Byron, Representative Sol Bloom and his daughter, Miss Vera Bloom (I didn't see Mrs. Bloom if she was there), the Minister of Siam and Mme. Rajamaitri, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Goodale, and dozens more.

CAPITAL GRAPEVINE: Rumors are going the rounds that detailed instructions have bee nsent to the White House stipulating that His Britannic Majesty would like to have two light-wool blankets on his bed, each with a silk slip, and an eiderdown puff at the bottom incased in an accordion-pleated bag. Her Majesty, however, does not care for a puff. She prefers merely a silk coverlet at the bottom of her bed and likes to have her two light-wool blankets turned back, not all the way across, but triangle fashion . . . Only person I've seen who looks her best in one of those quaint shirtwaist dinner dresses is Mrs. William O. Douglas. The black and white one she wore to the party given recently by Assistant Attorney General and Mrs. Thurman Arnold was not only one of the prettiest frocks there, but the most becoming one I have ever seen her wear . . . Several parties are to be given this week for Miss Kathleen Knox, whose engagement was announced today. A number of Washington residents will go to Kearny, N. J., on Saturday to attend the launching of two cargo vessels of the United States Marine Commission. Mrs. Thomas M. Woodward is the sponsor of one, S. S. Challenge; Mrs. Edward C. Moran, jr., is sponsor of the S. S. Red Jacket. Following the launching, both will be feted at a large reception.

Mrs. Hutton Hostess

Chapter A of the P. E. O. will meet at the home of Mrs. T. A. Hutton, second vice president of the District of Columbia Chapter, College Heights, at 8 p. m. tomorrow. Mrs. Roy A. Potts will preside. At the last meeting of the chapter, at the home of Mrs. Bruce Fales, Woodside, with Dr. Ella R. Fales as assisting hostess, two new members were initiated, Miss Glenna Irene Potts, daughter of the president, and Miss Virginia Loveland, formerly of Colorado.

Use Catalina Pottery For Effective Flower Arrangements says "Mary Annette," Decorating Hostess of The Hecht Co.

Half the charm of flower arrangements depends upon the holders you use. Not tricky, bizarre affairs that detract from the beauty of the blossoms themselves, but bowls, vases and novelty shapes that were designed especially for short and long-stemmed blooms. The Catalina potteries are noted for their distinctive holders and today I show but three of a number that have recently arrived . . . all done in soft pastel shades or in combinations of white and pastels. The conch shell can be used for either fruit or flowers, depending upon which side you set it. The interesting fluted vase would be ideal for tall stemmed flowers such as jonquils, cosmos or roses. The cunning little snail shell may also be used for fruit or flowers. Come in and see the entire group. You'll be amazed at the ingenuity shown in their design.
Consult Mary Annette or any of our other decorators at any time, without any charge or obligation whatsoever. If you prefer an appointment, just phone NAtional 5100, Branch 500.

House, Senate In Uproar Over Argentine Beef

Pittman Doubts Pact Will Be Favored; Reps. Mundt, Coffee Attack

By Arthur Hachten.
International News Service Staff Correspondent.

Scorching denunciation of President Roosevelt's order that Argentine beef be bought for the United States Navy was heard in the House yesterday, while indignant Senators moved to halt the purchase through an amendment to the pending Navy Department appropriation bill.

Emphatic protests against the President's action came to legislators from the Western cattle country. Politicians, with an eye to 1940 elections, said they were concerned over reports from the West that the prairie States were ablaze with indignation.

The flare-up on the House floor, in which 11 Representatives, Democrats and Republicans, bitterly assailed the President's action and called for a "Buy American" program, is expected to be followed by a similar outburst on the Senate floor. The Senate was not in session yesterday, but will be today.

1933 Statute Recalled

Before a Senate Appropriations Sub-committee is pending the House-approved Navy bill, carrying a stipulation that only American-produced food may be bought for the Navy.

There is a general statute, enacted in 1933, which provides for a policy of "Buy American" on all supplies used by the Government, except where prices are unreasonably high or it is not in the public interest to buy here; that is, when necessary to meet an emergency.

President Roosevelt, in directing the State Department to proceed with purchase of 48,000 pounds of Argentine canned beef, said it was superior to American beef and the price—15 cents a pound including 6 cents duty—compared with 23 cents bid by domestic packers.

Mundt Introduces Bill

Representative Carl Mundt (Republican), of South Dakota, introduced in the House a "Buy American farm products" bill, and Representative Leo Allen (Republican), of Illinois, presented a resolution to have Speaker Bankhead name a special House committee of five to investigate proposed purchase of Argentine beef for the Navy. This resolution also would request the Secretary of the Navy to halt the purchase pending the House inquiry.

"There is plenty of resentment on this side of the aisle," Representative Coffee (Democrat), of Nebraska, declared during the House uproar.

President Roosevelt is attempting "to force the Senate to ratify the Argentine sanitation pact, which would permit shipment of fresh and chilled beef into the United States and thereby threaten this country with an outbreak of hoof and mouth disease," Coffee charged.

But Senator Key Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, told International News Service he did not believe the Foreign Relations Committee, of which he is chairman, will report favorably the sanitation pact.

Fear Cattle Plague

"The matter of letting in beef and livestock from the Argentine," he said, "is a health matter. The Department of Agriculture has found repeatedly that Argentine cattle are afflicted with hoof and mouth disease and if we ever let any of these cattle come in we would have a plague costing many millions of dollars."

Senator Adams (Democrat), of Colorado, and others have argued that the Federal Government distributing hundreds of millions of dollars to the hard-pressed farmers in an effort to keep production in line with demand, it is false economy to allow foreign farm products to come into the American market.

Army Opposes Canal Across Virginia Shore

The chief of Army Engineers yesterday opposed the proposed construction of a waterway across the Eastern Shore of Virginia connecting the Atlantic and the Chesapeake Bay.

In a report to Congress, Maj. Gen. J. L. Schley said that Maryland and Virginia advocated a 24-mile canal across the Shore a few miles below the State line, but that local interests opposed it. Ten miles of the waterway would have to be cut across dry land, while 14 miles could be built by improving creeks and inlets, he said.

An unfavorable report was also made on a proposed improvement of Oyster Creek, Md., an arm of the Chesapeake 2 miles south of the mouth of the Severn River.

AFL Parley Opens at Hagerstown

Wider Unionization Of Maryland, District Barbers Is Suggested

By the Associated Press.

Hagerstown, Md., May 15.—A call for wider unionization of State barbers by boycotting unorganized shops was sounded today at the opening of the thirty-fourth convention of the Maryland District of Columbia Federation of Labor.

A resolution asking members to patronize only those barber shops which display union cards was unanimously passed while a half dozen others were shelved for further consideration.

Emphasis given the barber resolution was marked because not a barber shop in Hagerstown is a member of the union.

Joseph P. McCurdy, federation president, told the 275 delegates he favored a thorough investigation into some employers of vocational school graduates because of reports the young craftsmen were being "exploited."

Some employers hiring vocational school graduates, McCurdy said, had attempted to break down the standards built up by the labor federation.

Attorney General William C. Walsh called upon the federation to "keep your ranks free of foreign 'isms' and carry on the labor movement in the American way."

The "arraignment of class against class will not bring about a solution to labor's problems," he advised. "Labor and capital should co-operate; the well-being of one depends upon the well-being of the other."

Walsh said he had served as counsel to both sides in labor controversies and knew from experience that "differences always can be solved around the conference table."

The Rev. Father J. F. Cronin, professor of economics at St. Mary's Seminary, warned delegates that "unless the problem of unemployment in America is solved, we may lead to the path of Berlin or Russia."

Foreign "isms," he said, "are getting closer to America. Bolivia and Mexico are headed by military cliques now. And we may head in that direction."

Fight Develops

Newport News, Va., May 15 (AP).—Business of the Virginia State Federation of Labor bogged down in almost continuous debate over the seating of delegates today with "administration" forces counting a victory in the initial skirmish, but another lively contest was carried over until tomorrow.

The forty-fourth convention was in the midst of debate on the seating of three delegates from the Teamsters, Chauffeurs and Helpers Local 639 of Washington, D. C., when adjournment was taken this afternoon until 9 a. m.

The name of William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, was brought into the discussion when the credentials committee reported the A. F. of L. head had ruled affiliation with more than one State federation could not be permitted. Thomas O'Brien, representative of the International Teamsters' Union, argued that members of the local resident in Virginia were entitled to representation and that members resident in Maryland were entitled to representation in that State's federation.

The discussion grew so heated that President O. C. Moore, of Norfolk, had difficulty maintaining order as delegates clammered for recognition or sought to shout down those who had the floor.

This fight was a sequel to a morning contest in which backers of the federation administration defeated a motion of Fred Kennedy, of Alexandria, to seat delegates, "for the benefit of the federation," in advance of the credentials committee's report.

Virginia Nurses Convention Will Open Tomorrow

Charlottesville, Va., May 15.—Eight University of Virginia nurses will attend the twenty-ninth convention of the Graduate Nurses Association of Virginia, which opens in Danville Wednesday and continues through Friday.

District 7 of the association will be represented by Mrs. Howard Turner and Miss Emma Harlan, of this city, and Misses Helen Haley and Nellie Faulkner will be delegates from the University Hospital Training School Alumnae Association. Miss Myrtle Hollo, president of the Virginia League of Nursing Education, will preside over a section meeting Thursday. She is also second vice president of the Graduate Nurses Association.

Minister Protests Military Parades

Richmond, Va., May 15 (AP).—The Rev. Marshall Wyatt, Petersburg Presbyterian minister, protested in a letter today to Secretary of State Cordell Hull the practice of welcoming visiting royalty with military parades.

The clergyman characterized a parade of "our instruments of destruction and death" as an "insult" to visiting royalty. He said his protest was made "in the name of civilization and the Christianity of this Nation."

Funeral Rites Set Tomorrow For Ex-Judge

Joseph L. Bailey Served 1st Circuit For Many Years

By the Associated Press.

Salisbury, Md., May 15.—Funeral rites will be held Wednesday for former Judge Joseph L. Bailey, prominent Eastern Shoreman and an active figure in Wicomico County Democratic politics.

Bailey died Sunday at the Peninsula General Hospital here. He had been ill three weeks, and last Wednesday pneumonia developed. He became steadily worse and lapsed into unconsciousness Saturday.

Rites will be conducted by Dr. Albert H. Frost at St. Peter's Protestant Church at 11:30 a. m. Wednesday. Burial will be in Parsons Cemetery.

Bailey was appointed on July 17, 1917, by Gov. Emerson C. Harrington to fill a vacancy in the first judicial circuit. That autumn he was elected an associate judge for a full 15-year term. At the end of his term Gov. Ritchie appointed him to continue as judge until the 1934 general election. He did not seek re-election that year.

Wilbur T. Dameron

Funeral services for Wilbur T. Dameron, 64, Scottsville, Va., police chief who died Thursday, were held Sunday in Scottsville.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Ada Robinson Dameron, Scottsville, and seven children, Aubrey and Wilbur Dameron, Roanoke, Va.; Mrs. W. C. Bove, Gordon Dameron and Gladys Dameron, Scottsville; Mrs. D. J. Shaw and Floyd Dameron, Washington.

Jack Jouett's Ride Anniversary to Be Observed June 6

Charlottesville, Va., May 15.—At the monthly meeting of Jack Jouett Chapter, D. A. R, held at the home of Mrs. Bessie Dunn Miller, at Free Union, announcement was made that the chapter would observe the 158th anniversary of Jouett's ride on June 6 at the Farmington Country Club. It was Jouett's dashing ride from Cuckoo Tavern, in Louisa County, that saved members of the Virginia Assembly and Gov. Jefferson from capture by British troops.

After the business meeting, at which Mrs. Arthur Pegau, regent, presided, reports were made by those who attended the Continental Congress of the D. A. R. Those making talks were Mrs. Thomas Clifford Ritchie, delegate; Mrs. Frederick T. Morse, page from Virginia; Mrs. John McLeod, Mrs. Bruce D. Reynolds and Mrs. John S. Graves.

G.O.P. Picks Marine for House Race

Former Maryland Labor Chieftain Unanimous Choice Of Committee

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 15.—A. Stengle Marine, Maryland's retiring State labor commissioner, won nomination today as the Republican candidate in the special First District election June 6 to pick a successor to former Representative T. Alan Goldsborough.

Marine, a Cambridge lawyer, and three times State's attorney of Dorchester County, will be making his third bid for a seat in the House of Representatives.

Twice before he was defeated by Goldsborough, who recently was appointed a Federal District judge in Washington. This time, Marine will contest with State Senator David J. Ward, of Salisbury, the Democratic nominee.

Marine's nomination by the G. O. P. State central committee came as swiftly as did Ward's last week, with less than an hour required for the meeting.

Prior to the balloting, State Senator Wilmer Fell Davis, of Caroline County; State's Attorney F. Kirk Maddrix, of Somerset County, and Robert F. Duer, of Princess Anne, chairman of the conservation commission, were being widely discussed as possible choices.

Maddrix was the only one of the group who had publicly announced his candidacy.

W. David Tilghman, jr., State chairman, gave the committeemen from the nine Eastern Shore counties a chance to caucus, and they left the room to confer with Duer as caucus chairman.

Fifteen minutes later, they reported Marine was their unanimous choice, and the whole committee then voted his nomination.

Marine has represented the Eastern Shore at both State and national Republican conventions. His term as labor commissioner expired May 1, but he remained as a holdover until Gov. O'Conor recently appointed his successor.

CCC Starts Work On Reconstruction Of Sunken Road

Fredericksburg, Va., May15.—Reconstruction of a portion of the famous stone wall along Sunken road, behind which the Confederate soldiers under command of Gen. Cobb were concealed in the battle of Fredericksburg, was started yesterday by a group of CCC enrollees under the supervision of officials of the Fredericksburg and Spotsylvania Battlefield Park.

The portion to be reconstructed, approximately 200 yards in length, extends from Lafeyette Boulevard to the rear of the property on which the National Park Service Administration building and museum is located. Park Service officials said this morning that although the stone used in the reconstruction will not be the actual stone in the first wall, it will be old stone and of the type of which the original wall was built.

Fire Destroys Hotel, Gymnasium

St. Michaels, Md., May 15 (AP).—The 28-room Hotel Bellefonte at Claiborne, near here, was destroyed late last night by fire of undetermined origin.

Firemen from St. Michaels, Easton, Oxford and Tilghman sought to bring the blaze under control. Nearby property was not endangered and there were no guests in the hotel when the fire broke out.

B. Frank Sherman, manager of the Claiborne ferry, said the hotel was valued at about $25,000 and had been sold a month ago to the Delmarva Mortgage Co., at Salisbury Md.

Wanesboro, Va., May 15 (AP).—Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the gymnasium on the Fishburne Military School campus this morning. The loss was not estimated.

V.M.I. Marks 75th Anniversary Of Battle of New Market

Last Survivor of Cadet Charge of Boy Soldiers, in Talk, Pays Tribute To Courage of His Fellows on Field

By the Associated Press.

Lexington, Va., May 15.—The valor of the V. M. I. cadets at the Battle of New Market was recalled anew by speakers here today in the presence of the last survivor of the famous charge just 75 years ago.

William Morison Wood, of Old Hickory, Tenn., who is the last of the little band of boy soldiers who filled a breach in the Confederate line at a critical moment in the engagement, joined in tribute to the "indomitable courage and deeds of daring" of his fellows.

He was invited to be the guest of honor for the occasion, which was a dual celebration, marking the opening of the V. M. I. centennial observance as well as commemorating the part the Institute played in turning back the Federals May 15, 1864.

"Wherever over the world at eventide on this day two or more V. M. I. men are gathered together, the valor of the New Market corps is honored," said Col. William Couper, executive officer and historiographer of the Institute, who introduced Wood.

Maj. Gen. Charles E. Kilbourne, superintendent of V. M. I., declared the War the States was filled with examples of gallantry, courage and chivalry and "the men of V. M. I., both as individuals and as a battalion, were second to none in high ideals of duty and honor."

Wood, in his message to the present corps in Jackson hall, a memorial to the former institute artillery instructor, Gen. T. J. "Stonewall" Jackson, declared that the V.M. I. battalion at New Market, "by their indomitable courage and deeds of daring, have elicited the admiration and praise of all who are familiar with the history of this famous battle."

". . . I was a member of 'A' company and on behalf of the Wood family of Southwest Virginia," he said, "who for many years have and are still wearing the gray uniform of V. M. I., may I be permitted to mention three brothers who fought under Stonewall Jackson, two of whom attended the V. M. I., also a first cousin, reared in my father's family, four nephews, two great-nephews and a grandson, who is now present, a member of 'F' company."

Wood said the Institute, by "wise, economic management of those in authority," had expanded greatly since he was a cabet, and he congratulated the superintendent "on the very efficient and successful achievements of his administration," and told the cabets they should be congratulated on their "good fortune" of being enrolled in the institution.

Col. Couper declared the Confederate victory at New Market had two important results, the saving of the City of Lynchburg and the protecting of Gen. Lee's flank and line of supply.

"Had the cadets and their older comrades been unsuccessful at New Market, Lynchburg, an important military center, must inevitably have been captured by the invaders," Col. Couper said.

Roanoke, Va., May 15 (AP).—That the Vaughan Furniture Co. plant at Galax, closed last summer by a strike of employes protesting against a wage cut, will be back in full production within 30 days, was predicted by Taylor G. Vaughan, president of the concern in Roanoke this morning.

Banks Urged To Eliminate Interest Plan

Virginia Financiers Also Advised to Collect for Service

Aboard Queen of Bermuda En Route to Bermuda, May 15.—Dr. H. C. Sauvain, of Indiana University, suggested to the Virginia Bankers Association today further development of service charges and elimination of interest paid on time deposits as "two major remedies for the present weaknesses of commercial banking.

Speaking as the Virginia bankers and their wives sailed toward Bermuda for a convention-cruise, the Indiana professor of finance, declared the payment of interest on deposits was an "archaic practice."

It's a hangover from the days when you could loan out most of your money in good commercial loans at 6 per cent," he said. "Then you could afford to pay for deposits. Today you can't. I don't think the average bank should pay interest on any type of deposit, with the possible exception of genuine thrift accounts and in some cases public funds."

Dr. Sauvain said most of the fears about loss of deposits from reducing or eliminating the rate of interest paid "are greatly exaggerated," and declared he did not know of a single case where a bank which had tried it has "actually suffered."

"The modern bank, as I visualize it," he said, "is one which does not pay interest on any kind of deposits, with perhaps a few exceptions, and which has a system of service charges actually making the public pay for the banking service it gets.

Md. Suitor Kills Matron And Himself

Widower Shoots Girl-Friend After She Takes Job in Postmaster's Home

By the Associated Press.

Wingate, Md., May 15.—While two spectators, too far away to interfere, watched in horrified helplessness a 33-year-old waterman today killed Mrs. Alta Moore, then fired two shotgun blasts into himself in what Coroner J. Richard Jones said was a murder and suicide.

The two witnesses rushed to the bodies sprawled only 100 yards from Wingate's business district. They found Kenneth Robinson dead. Mrs. Moore died as they sped her to a Cambridge hospital.

Slain in Chickenyard

Mrs. Moore, 30, separated from her husband since October, and Robinson, a resident of nearby Crocheron, had been "keeping company" since last summer when they worked together in a packing house, neighbors said.

She was the mother of a 3-year-old child. Robinson, a widower, also had one child.

The shotting occurred in the chickenyard at the home of Postmaster C. M. M. Wingate, where Mrs. Moore was employed as housekeeper last week.

B. O. Murphy, cashier of the South Dorchester Bank, and Harvey Moore, a grocery clerk not related to Mrs. Moore, told Jones they saw the shooting.

Murphy, watching from his office window, said he saw Robinson fire a blast into Mrs. Moore's back, then step behind a hencoop. A second later he heard another shot.

Describes Two Shootings

Moore said he rounded a corner of the Wingate house as Robinson shot the woman. Without a glance at her, Moore said, Robinson stepped beside the chicken house. He put the butt of the gun on the ground, leaned over the muzzle and fired.

He dropped to the ground, but arose, bent again over the gun with the muzzle pressed against his left cheek. The second shot tore away his face. He was dead when Moore reached his side.

Jones said an inquest would not be necessary.

Bids Date Set

Crosby Sings at Best in "East Side of Heaven"

Previewed Film Introduces New Baby Wonder; 'Juarez' Accorded Magazine Prominence; News Notes and Gossip of the Theater

"EAST SIDE OF HEAVEN," the new Universal production, which will be the next screen attraction at RKO-Keith's, was made to order for those who enjoy hearing Bing Crosby sing hit tunes as only he can sing them. Crosby, star of the picture, sings more in this subject than he has in his last two or three films combined.

BELL

There is more than the star's singing to make "East Side of Heaven" something that will appeal to a vast number of theatergoers. That "more" is a baby by the name of "Sandy," who is just about the best year-old player that has come along since Baby LeRoy crashed the cinema by virtue of a precocity that was well-nigh uncanny. "Sandy" possesses the same baby quality of superlative personality. Although playing the part of a baby boy in this film, "Sandy," one is given to believe, is the young lady daughter of Roy Henville, a Los Angeles milkman. Whatever the gender, forebears or previous condition of servitude of this youngster, she now seems to be captured for an indeterminate period by the motion pictures. There have been "finds" and "finds," from time to time, among the baby stars of Hollywood, but "Sandy" seems to be the prize one of the lot. When "Sandy" coos, gurgles, sputters, laughs, crinkles her nose and does her other tricks before the camera, she will slay you, no less.

But apart from all this "East Side of Heaven" has its other elements of direct audience attack. It gets off slowly and not too interestingly, to be sure, but gradually gets into its true stride and pace and compounds a considerable degree of romantic interest, as well as suspense. There is the crabbed millionaire who attempts to run his son's and daughter-in-law's lives—played this time by C. Aubrey Smith, instead of Claude Gillingwater—the distraught daughter-in-law, who leaves her baby with a singing taxi driver for safe keeping, and the taxi driver and his "bunkie," Nicky, who have troubles of their own. Danny Martin's chief trouble is Mary Wilson, played by Joan Blondell. Nicky is an antic fellow, impersonated by Mischa Auer. Mr. Auer is a bogus astrologer in this one and, on occasion, is extremely amusing.

Smash Song Number

There is one song in the picture's hit score that is built up into a major number. That is "Hang Your Heart on a Hickory Limb." It is tossed all over the place in Mrs. Kelly's "Frying Pan" restaurant, with Crosby initiating the forward passes. During this highly harmonious interlude, three buxom ladies sing the thing with an effect that is unique. The waitresses chip in, too, with some nifty rhythms and by the time the number is wound up it has established itself as one of the high spots of the entertainment. Our old "drummer boy" friend, Jack Powell, has a bit as a chef in this elaborated musical melange that identifies him further as the theater's greatest syncopationist, even when he has nothing to syncopate on but pots and pans.

"East Side of Heaven" may be opening any day now on Fifteenth street—maybe on Thursday, perhaps not before Friday, then, again, tomorrow is a possibility. Whenever it does get going, I think you will enjoy it—not as anything profound, but as genial and agreeable diversion with many unusual qualities to commend it.

"East Side of Heaven'" was not the only item of importance that Manager Hardie Meakin, of RKO-Keith's, unfurled before the drama desks yesterday afternoon at his triple-barreled preview. There also were the new issue of the "March of Time" and Walt Disney's latest Donald Duck cartoon comedy, in Technicolor, "The Hockey Champ." This new "March of Time," to be shown with the Crosby feature, as is "The Hockey Champ," treats of the single subject of the economic problem presented by the South. It is, perhaps, one of the most comprehensive treatments of any one subject that "Time" ever has brought to the screen and should be of extraordinary interest to every resident below the Mason-Dixon line, as well as to all those who sit in the halls of Congress, whether in House or Senate. As for "The Hockey Champ," it is one of the craziest and one of the best "Donald Ducks," Lisney has turned out in many a long month. It will roll you in the aisle.

The Warner Brothers' production of "Juarez," costarring Paul Muni and Bette Davis, both Academy Award winners must be quite a picture, just as all of the prerelease material cascading across this desk has declared.

In the May 1 issue of Stage Magazine, a three-page spread is prefaced by the notation that "An inspired motion picture captures a lost moment in history." On top of that, Life, in its issue of May 8, nominates "Juarez" as "The picture of the week" and goes on to say that "Democracy is Warners' hero in film of Mexico's tragic Emperor."

We have heard a good deal about this film during its making. Perhaps you remember the letter published here from John Garfield. With Muni in the title role, Brian Aherne and Bette Davis as the tragic imperial pair and Garfield as Porfirio Diaz, this might turn out to be quite a number.

How's about a preview, Messrs. John J. Payette, Frank La Falce, Dan Terrell, Bill Ewing, et al? I hope so.

Congratulations to Samuel Goldwyn upon having become sole proprietor of United Artists Studios. He is the only active member of the group that originally formed this producing corporation, Sam is entitled to full command of the plant he alone has kept in the running among the majors. There have been quips, wisecracks and smart saying aimed at Mr. Goldwyn, but he is one of the keenest and most astute showmen in the business. I have known him for years and my last year's, second-hand Panama is off to him.

Peanuts-and-Pink Lemonade Note:

The circus certainly had a nice day for it.

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, May 15.

OUMANSKY, Russia's newly appointed Ambassador to this country, was at the Stork Club the other night with the two Russian aviators who made a trans-Atlantic flight . . . The fliers are returning to Russia . . . "They're going back via the French line," Oumansky said . . . "Why don't they sail on the Bremen—the German ship?" I asked him . . . The diplomat made no direct outburst . . . He pursed his lips coldly and glared . . . "And that," he added, "is putting it mildly."

LUTHER ADLER, according to latest report, is the one who finally will appear in the Lon Chaney role in the revival of "The Hunchback of Notre Dame" . . . Anita Loos, the scenarist, will return to N. Y. this summer—to witness a dramatization of her "Gentlemen Prefer Blondes." It will be a period production—with the cast wearing clothes of 1928 . . . Ina Claire rented her New York apartment, and the next day ordered all the breakables moved out. Her new tenant is Charles Merrill, the banker, of Merrill, Lynch & Co.—with 20 million.

SINCLAIR LEWIS told this story the other night, in discussing the frequent occasions when his name is confused with Upton Sinclair's . . . When Lewis met Sinclair, the latter said: "I didn't mind the mixup as long as they were attributing 'Main Street' to me . . . But I started to mind it when they began attributing 'The Jungle' to you." Lewis then was told of the completely unfounded assertions by the Nazis that he is Jewish . . . Are you Jewish?" he was asked . . . "You'll never know," the Nobel Prize winner replied. "Because if I were Jewish I wouldn't deny it. And if I weren't I'd be so proud of having been called Jewish that I wouldn't deny it."

THE NEW COLBERT Restaurant is located on property owned by the British Crown. Next week the restaurateurs will serve to the press exactly the same dinner and wines served to the King and Queen of England during Their Majesties' visit to Versailles last summer . . . The Duncan sisters will return to New York . . . Larry Clinton's band will open at the Park Central . . . George Bernard Shaw has joined the British Screen Writers. The 82-year-old Shaw paid his membership fee in advance—for ten years . . . Franklin D. Roosevelt jr., will broadcast the Poughkeepsie Regatta this year, provided that he gets paid for it.

SOPHIE TUCKER, who is an official of the American Federation of Actors, was up until late the other day settling the union's difficulties with a night-club proprietor . . . Miss Tucker emerged, triumphantly, from the conference room after long hours of wrangling . . . "Well," she sighed, "that's finished. From now on, boys—call me John L. Tucker."

FORTUNE'S July issue will feature an article about New York and vice conditions as affected by the fair. Among the revelations will be that the largest establishment is on Fifty-eighth street, and that the current password there is "The fat man of the World's Fair sent me" . . . Morton Gill Clark's newest novel, "Grace, I Give You," is being cleaned up for newspaper serialization . . . A member of the New York State Banking Board—one of the few State organizations which never has been subjected to criticism—was asked: "To what do you attribute such an achievement?" . . . "To the fact," he explained, "that we're the only State board who never had our picture taken."

THE GROUP THEATER, in preparing its next productions, is still trying to find a way of ascertaining audience-reaction without the necessity of first making an expensive presentation . . . Before "Golden Boy" was produced, the cast assembled at the home of Bobby Lewis, who since has become a group director, and there read their lines . . . The only outsider permitted to witness this reading was Lewis' sister, Golda, who designs jewelry . . . After each Odets line the cast turned to Golda—who, realizing she was an outsider and that the others were quite nervous, tried to remain cold and aloof and, so, controlled revealing her reactions . . . She never was told that she was being used—as a test audience.

ELLIOTT ROOSEVELT visited the Havana-Madrid, where a newspaper photographer asked him to pose . . . "Okay," he agreed, "but if you're going to use any captions on that picture, please refer to me as the president of the Texas network—and nothing more" . . . "What do you mean, 'nothing more'?" asked the camera man . . . "I mean," Elliott explained, "please don't describe me just as somebody's son."

Vital News and Vivid 'Shorts' At Trans-Lux

Newsreel Theater's Current Bill Excels In Diversity

In its best tradition of specializing in pictures based on fact, rather than fiction, the Trans-Lux Theater can take pride in this week's showing of the British-produced documentary film "North Sea." Besides an intensely interesting episode against a grand, wild, sea background, the natural functioning of the Aberdeen fishermen in their struggle to master the effects of the storm and save their ship is refreshingly free of professional actors' posings and tricks, and makes for a mightily impressive picture.

There is also another very worthwhile "short," bearing the title of "Circus Co-Ed" and picturizing the training and experience of a circus performer, in this instance an attractive young woman, on the way up to become a finished artist. Some of the episodes are serio-comic.

Disney's "Old Mill" is also on the program, and this masterful cartoon is worthy of a long life and many revivals.

The News Pictorial is generously complete, more than 35 items of timely interest, two especially so—the Coal Strike Settlement, and the spectacular Chicago Grain Elevator Fire. Other momentous flashes show Poland ready for any attack; Hitler addressing the Reichstag, replying to President Roosevelt's message, and President Roosevelt's meeting and entertaining President Somoza of Nicaragua.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 15 (INS).—"Goodby, Mr. Chips" has not only given the whole film colony ideas, but it is responsible for the purchase of "Valedictory" by McKinlay Kantor. Described as an American, "Mr. Chips," the hero, is a janitor in a school who spends his entire life finding happiness in other people's youngsters. Lionel Barrymore, who also played in Kantor's "The Voice of Bugle Ann," will be seen as the janitor and what a job he will do as the lovable old man!

LOUELLA PARSONS

Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer is giving Lionel only a few pictures, so he may rest and feel fit, but the few he will do are real Barrymore stories, tailored especially for him. The American slant on "Valedictory," of course, will be a public school. That's where so many of our great men were educated.

Talked with "Bee" Lillie at length at the Elsa Maxwell party and she tells me she never had any intention of joining the Earl Carroll Revue. I wonder why the story was given us by the Earl Carroll P. A., for it seems such a silly thing to do when it was sure to be denied later. "Bee" sails shortly for England to look over some plays and here is an interesting thing. She expects to go into the "Ziegfeld Follies" at M-G-M when she returns. She says she loves Hollywood and would like to make another picture here. While we were talking, Anita Loos said she had another idea for a story for "Bee"—a history of music halls and if Anita gets time to write it, some producer will snap it up.

Just heard Raoul Walsh and Hal Wallis got together today on a contract for Raoul to remake Warden Lawes' "20,000 Years in Sing Sing." The deal was negotiated by Schulberg and Jeffee and calls for an option on the director's services. The fans, I have no doubt, will be interested to hear that John Garfield will have the male lead, with Ann Sheridan as the girl. Opinions on Ann's appeal vary. At a party the other evening, some of the men went into a rave over her, while others said she did not have the appeal of a Hedy Lamarr, Marlene Dietrich or a Norma Shearer.

Cesar Romero is frankly disturbed over the attentions of Orlys Baune, a youngster from San Francisco who hitch-hiked down here just to see her hero. He had no idea she was in town, until he walked into the "Folies Bergere" and there on the sidelines was Orlys, as flushed of face and as excited as when she followed the elephant train on foot in San Francisco just to keep her eye on Romero. She's given up the idea of going into the movies, since Twentieth Century-Fox isn't interested and, from last reports, she's decided to join a circus—if she can find one. These movie struck girls should profit from Orlys' experiences. She's in town broke.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Charlie Chaplin's protegee, Linda Winters (Dorothy Cummingore), and Richard Collins, Para writer, have taken out a license to wed; the wedding of Toni Lanier and Eddie Mannix is believed to be only a matter of days; Constance Collier never knew she lost a valuable brooch at the Maxwell-Bennett party until the next day. A waiter from Victor Hugo's found it and had it locked in the safe for her; the good-looking girl with Dennis O'Keefe at the House of Murphy was his mother. He took her stepping Mother's Day; Elaine Barrymore, mamma, and Ramon Ramos, orchestra leader, were having more fun at Marcel's chatting and laughing; was that Sugar Kane in a huddle with Dick Greene at the Bali?

Joseph Schenck, just back from New York, was host to Crown Prince Olav and Princess Martha of Norway today. Sonja Henie, whom their highnesses particularly wanted to meet, was among those who met them when they arrived in our city; the Ben Goetzes and the Victor Savilles hosted a party at the Troc after the "Chips" preview; Greer Garson has rented a Beverly Hills manse. If she goes over the way everyone expects, she will be able to buy a house ere long; Beverly Robert's mother is very sick in a sanitarium and poor Beverly, who has had more than her share of bad luck, is greatly worried; Mrs. Leslie Howard denies she is returning to England and says when she goes, it will be with her actor husband—unless, of course, war should be declared; Claudette Colbert is learning to skeet shoot, with Mrs. Gary Cooper, no less, as her tutor.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

Youth Served Badly

How a wandering group of youngsters is delivered into virtual slavery in the heart of America's turpentine belt forms the basis of "Boy Slaves," featuring Anne Shirley and Roger Daniel.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., May 15.—Howard Hawks certainly loads excitement in "Only Angels Have Wings." I didn't look like angels to me, but knew what to do with wings.

HOPPER

I have never seen better flying anywhere.

And if Cary Grant keeps getting better, we'll have him leading the procession. What a joy seeing Jean Arthur again, who makes everything she does believable. That Susan Hayward is an eye-filler. Has she got oomph? Uh-huh!

Took lots of courage for Dick Barthelmess, who was one of our biggest stars, to play a heel, even though he ended as a hero. He gave it all he had, which delighted his fans. If Tommy Mitchell continues like this, they'll have to star him in spite of themselves. There wasn't a bad performance in it. In other words, it's a thriller and I don't mean with a small "T" either.

Now that Jack Benny's "Man About Town" has made a big success, it' interesting to know why they shelved "The New Yorker," a picture slated for Jack. He was to play a jewel thief.

There's a scene in "The Rains Came" that I just can't wait to see. Myrna Loy looks at Ty Power with dawning love in her eyes—and boom—comes the earthquake which precipitates the biggest flood Zanuck can afford this year. What an accent on love!

Zanuck's condemnation of radio, then his use of it for "Rose of Washington Square," where Johnstown ran the picture a close third, gave the whole country a giggle.

No leg to stand on, when Betty Grable finishes "Million Dollar Legs" at Paramount, which ends her contract.

Bing Crosby was so busy crooning in "The Star Maker" that he couldn't best-man it for brother Everett.

Leslie Howard was pretty bored playing Ashley in "Gone With the Wind" and couldn't understand why people on the set were mad at him when he showed up at 10 instead of 8:30. After all, he only got $150,000 for it.

The magicians are having a field day on the Tod Browning set, "Miracles for Sale." If you've got a miracle, he'll buy it.

Greg Ratoff's instructions to Linda Darnell for a scene: "Listen honey, New York isn't as gay as you want him to think you think it is. So calm down."

Loretta Young's boy friend, William Bruckner whose case hasn't yet been settled, is about to open an agency business in Hollywood to handle stars.

Wait until you hear the ultra-modern music in "The Wizard of Oz." It has cyclones, pounding on rails, wind machines, tinkley Gilbert and Sullivan type stuff. I don't believe they've overlooked even a cat's meow.

And speaking of MEOWS, you know that all animals, in fact every living thing in "The Women" has to be of the female gender. Horses, dogs cats, chickens, birds. The other day when they were about to serve an egg, one of the boys yelled: "Wait a second. We must find out which gender this is before you can eat it."

Did you know Alva Johnson will introduce Gene Autry to Hollywood. He's doing the story of Gene's life for the Post. Autry's a hero to every kid in America, but Hollywood doesn't know him by sight.

What did I tell you about tough guys? Just learned that John Garfield writes poetry in his off-moments. And for his vacation, after he finishes "Dust Be My Destiny" he may do some personal appearances in Mexico City with "Juarez." And it wouldn't be a bad idea to send him to South America, either. He looks so Spanish, they'd probably claim him as their own.

They'd better give Bette Davis a vacation, or she'll be known as the actress who worked herself right up to starvedom! Which would be our greatest calamity, because there's no one in sight to take her place.

In Comeback

RICHARD BARTHELMESS, long absent from the American screen, gets his big "comeback" opportunity in "Only Angels Have Wings," in support of Cary Grant and Jean Arthur. Coming soon to a Warner screen

Boat for Sale

Checking expenses for the year, Ian Hunter discovered that it has been costing him more to keep a boat in England than himself in Hollywood, so he's putting his 54-foot schooner up for sale.

★★★ WASHINGTON: TUESDAY, MAY 16, 1939 19

This Morning

With Shirley Povich

On the word of George P. Marshall, who is somewhat famed for such proclamations as "We won't miss Cliff Battles," we have it that his Redskins have signed "the greatest ball carrier the Southwest has ever had."

The name of this young man, it seems, is Dick Todd, and he hails from Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College, and in addition to proclaiming him as the Southwest's greatest, Mr. Marshall also states: "He is the best ball carrier to come into the National League since Battles."

POVICH

All of this is brought to our attention by a telegram from Mr. Marshall, whose idea of filling an odd moment is writing a telegram to somebody. In his wire there is also a gentle rebuke to his department which recently noted that the Redskins of 1938 were something of a flop. Wires Mr. Marshall: "Can not understand why you think a team that finished third in a 10-club league and lost the division championship by one game was a failure."

Perhaps Mr. Marshall is correct and his Redskins of 1938 were no failure, but we seem to remember that in two important games toward the end of the season, the Redskins were slaughtered by the Chicago Bears, 34 to 7, and got the daylights whaled out of 'em by the New York Giants, 49 to 14. If they weren't flops, we hesitate to say that they even bordered on success.

Well, anyway, Mr. Marshall's claims in behalf of his new recruit, Todd, seem to have started something. One of the first things they have started is a tour of the sports departments by Jack Espey, Marshall's Minister of Propaganda and Public Enlightenment with a portfolio that would choke an adult hippo.

If You Don't Believe It, Ask Mr. Espey

Espey is armed with statistics aimed to prove that Marshall is right, this time, and that Todd is, indeed, the greatest ball carrier ever to come out of the Southwest. Espey submits, among other data, this testimonial from one Davey O'Brien, who is a football player. It is a dispatch from the Amarillo (Tex.) News and it reads:

"And who, of all the football players he has faced, would Dave O'Brien consider the most dangerous man?"

"Says O'Brien, emphatically 'Dick Todd, of Texas A. and M.'"

Even in the face of Marshall's claims, O'Brien's testimony and Espey's statistics, this department is still remaining discreetly unconvinced. In fact, we might be inclined to give young Todd the benefit of the doubt were it not that he bears the indorsement of George Marshall.

Because we remember that it was less than a year ago that Mr. Marshall was about town beating his breasts and trumpeting that "We've got a player who'll make Washington fans forget all about Cliff Battles. This fellow is the greatest. His name is Jack (Rabbit) Abbitt, and he's a left-footed, left-handed triple-threat from little Elon College. Watch him."

It Seems That Somebody Was Wrong

Well, if you wanted to watch Abbitt play football last season, you had to go up to Wilkes-Barre, Pa., because that's where he landed. It seems that Owner Marshall and Coach Ray Flaherty had different ideas about Abbitt's ability to make Washington fans forget Battles. At least after Coach Flaherty got a few glimpses of Abbitt, and despite Marshall's stamp of approval, Flaherty not only failed to forget about Battles, but developed a great yearning to see Battles back in the Redskins' backfield.

However—and despite Marshall—there is some evidence that young Mr. Todd is something of a potent package on the football field, if the statistics which Press-Agent Espey is toting about town are no myth.

It seems that Todd, strangely enough for a Texas backfield star, does not throw passes, but catches 'em and is chiefly a ball carrier by trade. He was on the Texas A. and M. team that licked the Texas Christian team to end a 12-year jinx against T. C. U., and Sammy Baugh was with the Christians that year.

In three years at Texas A. and M., Todd has average 4.72 yards each time he carried the ball, and last season his average exceeded 5 yards per try. The figures on the fellow are complete if nothing else. They show that he has averaged 12 yards with each punt return and 30 yards with each kick-off return he has handled. And when he intercepted a pass he carried it back for an average of 19 yards. And he was playing in that tough Texas League.

Espey submits a picture of Todd, too. It shows him to be a well-built 190-pounder, built for speed and sturdiness. The print is a bit out of focus, but Espey explains that. "You see," says Espey, "this Todd is real fast. The cameraman was shooting him with an f 5.6 lens at 1/1000th of a second, and that isn't fast enough to get a clear picture of Todd in action."

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

Lieut. Col. Harvey L. Miller, the bland old marine who soon will become president of the National Boxing Association, and thus a kind of medicated czar of the nose-punching business, said yesterday that Mike Jacobs' many contracts with good fighters was the principal reason for the low condition of the fight game.

CONSIDINE

"If anybody has been wondering where all the good strong American boys are, the two-fisted lumberjacks, plumbers and truck drivers, the answer is that it isn't profitable to become a fighter anymore," Miller told us. "A good strong boy has to have more than talent to get into the top rank nowadays. He must be lucky, too, lucky enough to get under Jacobs' wing.

"Jacobs has run a lot of good honest shows," Miller continued. "And he'll run a lot more of them, of course, because he's got nearly all the good fighters. But he should temper his rule with a little mercy. He should let some of the other promoters have a chance. As it is now there isn't a promoter in the country who can run a truly important fight without first getting Jacobs' permission—and of course if the fight's important it won't get out of New York, no matter how good it would be as a local attraction somewhere else."

'Jacobs' Monopoly Will Defeat Itself'

Miller, who was mainly responsible for ranking Tony Galento the No. 1 heavyweight challenger, believes that Jacobs' monopoly will defeat itself. "He'll find that the supply of fighters will be seriously affected. The tough young boys will turn to something else, if they haven't done so already. Why, for instance, do you think Billy Conn has to fight middleweights? It's simply because there aren't enough light-heavyweights around to put in your hat. And there won't be, until a growing generation of fighters can be assured that they can make money on their own merits, and not on the chance of joining Jacobs' circus."

The N. B. A. now embraces 38 States, and though it endeavors daily to organize and unite the remaining States, it is hardy enough to drop a State that breaks its rules. Not long ago it pitched Massachusetts out of the union for sanctioning a bout in which Bob Pastor appeared. Pastor ducked out of a contract to fight Red Burman in New Jersey. The N. B. A.'s sharpest thorn is the militantly independent New York State Athletic Commission, which is forbidden by the terms of the Walker law to join a national body. They acknowledge different champions in the bantamweight featherweight, middleweight and light-heavyweight divisions.

The two warring bodies have been corresponding distantly of late over the status of John Henry Lewis, the cycloptic lightheavy champ, and Melio Bettina, who is recognized as lightheavy champion by New York, Albania and in the higher altitudes of Tibet. Miller has recommended, and it will be done, that Lewis be examined by three of the country's outstanding eye doctors upon his return to America. The Negro, okayed in New York to fight Louis, was found to have an 18-inch vision in one of his eyes by the Michigan State Athletic Commission soon after. It was a diagnosis in which the British boxing board concurred.

Title May Be Declared Vacant

Miller, incidentally, believes that both these commissions showed high-grade sportsmanship in kicking Lewis out of his proposed fights. "Michigan could have gotten the title with a Lewis-Dave Clark fight. And England, which wants a title so bad it can taste it, could have lifted Henry's crown with the help of Len Harvey. But neither group would stoop that low."

If Louis flunks his next test, or refuses to undergo it, the N. B. A. will declare the title vacant, Miller says. In that event it will recognize as an undisputed title fight any match between Bettina and Clark, Bettina and Conn, Bettina and Ron Richards, of Australia; Bettina and Gus Lesnevich, of Cliffside, N. J., or Bettina and Len Harvey. Miller ranks Conn high up with certain misgivings, but admits he might.

Miller has misgivings, too, about Max Baer. He has him ranked fifth in the world—behind Louis, Galento, the recently reinstated Pastor and Nova. "He may be that good, still, but then again he may be a lot worse. Nobody knows, including Baer," Miller chuckles. Miller plans to stick to Galento as the world's foremost challenger for the title right up until gong time—June 28.

"A lot of people have gotten the wrong idea about the way we've been plugging Tony. I don't think he's a good fighter. In fact, I think there's a pretty good chance that Louis can open up all those old cuts around Tony's eye with a few quick jabs. But I do say that the fellow can hit like a mule with his left hand and that if he hits Joe it's going to be a real fight. Maybe I should say it another way," Miller concluded. "Galento is the best of a parcel of the worst challengers in the history of the fight game."

Larry French Allows 6 Hits; Cubs Win, 6-2

Bruin Hurler in Rare Form as He Turns Back Bucs; Sewell Routed

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 15.—The Cubs resumed their winning ways over the Pittsburgh Pirates today, trimming the Bucs, 6-2, behind the six-hit pitching of the veteran Larry French. The victory was the tenth for the Cubs in the last 11 meetings of the clubs.

French was in rare form, retiring 14 of his former teammates in succession from the fourth inning to the ninth. The game gave the National League Champions six victories against seven defeats for their first long road trip.

Rip Sewell, who blanked the Giants on the Polo Grounds a few days ago, was hit hard by the Cubs and stepped aside for a pinch-hitter in the sixth. Mace Brown and Russell Bauers finished.

Augie Galan, moved to clean-up position in the batting order, reached first base for the eighth successive time in two games, getting a walk and three singles today.

Sewell walked Galan to start the second and Hank Leiber singled sharply, his first of three hits. After Glen Russell fanned Bartell doubled his two mates home.

The Pirates matched these two runs in their half of the inning on Arky Vaughan's single, Gus Suhr's double and "Jeep" Handley's line single. Excepting for Paul Waner's single in the third and Bill Brubaker's double in the fourth, both coming with two out, not a Pirate reached first base until the ninth, when Johnny Rizzo singled.

Bill Herman's double and singles by Jimmy Bleeson and Galan gave the Cubs the deciding run in the third. They added three more in the fifth when Herman walked, Hack and Gleeson lined out, but Galan singled and Leiber doubled all three runners scoring on a poor return from the outfield by Fern Bell and on Berres' error.

Yanks Blank A's, 3-0; Wes Ferrell Winner

Former Nat Is Forced to Retire in Seventh With Pain in Arm; Murphy Finishes Game As Champs Score Second Shutout in Row

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, May 15.—The New York Yankees blanked the Athletics for the second straight day today, winning, 3 to 0, behind the combined five-hit pitching of Wes Ferrell and Johnny Murphy to run their victory to five straight.

Ferrell, making his second start of the year, was credited with the win although he had to leave after the seventh inning because of a pain in the elbow. He allowed all five hits made by the Athletics.

Buck Ross pitched the first five innings for the Athletics, let in two of the Yankee runs and was charged with his third setback of the year, as the Yankees maintained their game and a half lead in the American League race.

The Yanks put the game on ice in the third inning, when Babe Dahlgren tripled and came home on Frank Crosetti's sacrifice fly. In the fifth, they added an unnecessary run on Joe Gordon's two-bagger, a wild pitch and Ferrell's double, and in the eighth, Bill Dickey's scratch single, a walk and George Selkirk's hit produced the final tally.

Dahlgren, with a triple and single, and Selkirk, with two singles, paced the Yanks' nine-hit attack.

Terp Frosh Beat Thurmont, 21 to 6

Behind the five-hit pitching of Whitney McCrea, Maryland Frosh defeated Thurmont High School, 21-6, yesterday on the Terps' field. The Marylanders collected 22 hits in seven innings before the game was called.

Thurmont scored five runs in their half of the third inning, which put them in the lead 5-2, but the Frosh came back in their half to score ten runs and put the game on ice.

Mrs. Feller's Injuries Slight, X-Rays Reveal

Chicago, May 15 (AP).—An examination of X-ray pictures today confirmed that Mrs. William Feller did not suffer a fracture when hit in the forehead by a foul ball yesterday while watching her son, Bob Feller, pitch for Cleveland.

Dr. Phillip Kreuscher said the X-ray showed no bones broken and that Mrs. Feller would be able to return to her Van Meter (Iowa) home in three or four days.

She was sitting in a box between first base and home plate when Marvin Owen, Chicago White Sox third baseman, batted the foul in the third inning.

Bridges to Face Krakauskas

The new Detroit Tigers, with Buck Newsom and three other ex-Browns in their midst, open a three-game series with the Nats at Griffith Stadium today.

Tommy Bridges, whose last start on the mound was a five-hit victory over the Washington club, will pitch today's opener. Joe Krakauskas, seeking his firs tvictory since beating the Yankees two weeks ago, is Bucky Harris' pitching choice.

Winchester Pro Wins Lion's Share of Prize Money

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.
A Staff Correspondent.

Winchester, Va., May 15.—Host Professional Rut Coffey overcame a disastrous 8 on the par 4 eleventh hole of the Winchester Country Club course here today to monopolize the prize money in the Middle Atlantic P. G. A. pro-amateur tournament by tying for first place in the pro-am and sweepstakes.

With Lester Arnold and Carl Campbell as partners, Coffey had 68 in the pro-amateur play, tying the 68 of Frank Invernizzi, Clifton Park, Baltimore, mentor, and S. Foxwell, of the same course.

Coffey, Invernizzi and George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood Club pro, divided the pro sweepstakes with identical 2 over par scores of 72. Prize money in the event was confined to the two three-way ties.

The stocky, consistent local mentor, steady winner in his sectional P. G. A. events, played easily the finest golf of the day over the short but troublesome layout. He started by holing a sand-wedge shot for an eagle deuce on the first hole, and retained his 2-under-par score through the tenth. On the par-4 eleventh he was in the ditch twice and trapped once, ending up with an 8. He played par golf from there in. His partners were of little help, except on the one big hole where they each bagged pars and lopped 4 strokes off Coffey's individual total for the tying score.

Invernizzi was consistent with a pair of 36s and Foxwell helped 2 shots on each nine for the 68.

Diffenbaugh holed a sizable birdie putt on the final green to finish with a 72. He and J. W. Harvey, jr., were a single stroke back of the winners with 69s, a score duplicated by Coffey and his third partner, R. Ryder.

Giants' Football Corporation Fined

New York, May 15 (AP).—The New York Football Giants, Inc., was fined $800 by Federal Judge John C. Knox today—the maximum fixed by law—on its conviction of not recording on tickets the price charged above the face value and the names of those selling them.

Helen Mara, a niece of John and Tim Mara, sports promoters, who was working as clerk and cashier, and Charles Chaplin, a clerk, were placed on probation for one day.

The tickets were sold last December for a game between the Giants and the Green Bay Packers.

Four Local Pitchers Give Red Sox 10 Hits

Ken Chase Slugged Out of Box In Two Innings; Thomas Lasts But One; Griffmen Again Fail to Hit

By Shirley Povich.

With what looked like hearty co-operation on the part of the Nats, Boston's expensive Red Sox appropriated a 9-2 ball game at Griffith Stadium yesterday, whereupon Washington dropped to sixth place.

Three Washington errors caused the Red Sox no pain, but the Nats pitchers weren't suffering particularly from the Nats' misplays. What they were suffering from was a stream of extra-base hits by the Boston folk who were whacking the ball with great authority.

The Sox collected ten hits off four Washington pitchers, but they weren't trifling much with singles. They were chiefly interested in two-baggers—four of 'em—and a Boston triple was also mixed up in the proceedings.

They slugged Ken Chase out of the box in two innings, and they dispatched Bud Thomas in one. They were working on Pete Appleton, too, before he was relieved by young Walter Masterson.

Four Hits in Seven Innings

The Nats' pitching and their fielding was no less inept than their hitting, however. Left-handed Freddy Ostermueller, an old-time nemesis—he licked the Nats four times last season—saw to that. Ostermueller reveled in the going against the Nats' left-handed batting order. He shut 'em out with four hits for seven innings and it wasn't until the eighth that they pushed a man as far as third base.

In the hair of the Nats' pitchers all afternoon was Joe Vosmik, a pesky individual who collected four of the Red Sox hits. Vosmik, in his first four times at bat, whacked a single, a triple, a double and another single. Appleton finally stopped him in the eighth. He hit him with a pitched ball.

Chase on the Run

Ken Chase had a horrible time of it at the start. He didn't get anybody out until the sixth hitter came to bat. The first thing Chase did was to pitch a two-bagger to Cramer, then he pitched a single to Vosmik, then he walked Foxx, then he pitched a single to Cronin, then he saw Myer muff Williams' grounder, then Tabor drove in the third run of the inning by hitting into a double play.

Before Manager Harris dispensed with Chase, he surrendered another run in the second inning after walking DeSautels. The run scored, logically enough, on a triple that Joe Vosmik slammed into centerfield, and the Red Sox led, 4 to 0.

Bud Thomas' debut in the third was not exactly auspicious. He started out by pitching a two-bagger to Cronin and then wild-pitched the Sox manager to third. Williams grounded to Travis and Cronin was trapped between third and home, but regained third when Giuliani threw wild to Lewis. Then Thomas heaved a wild one and Cronin came skipping home. A bit later Bobby Doerr doubled to left and the Sox had a 6-to-0 lead.

Vosmick Doubles

They made it 7-0 in the fourth after Appleton threw Vosmik his third straight hit—a two-bagger to left. George Case had a hand in that run. He dropped Foxx's long fly and Vosmik went to third, scoring on Cronin's sacrifice fly.

Appleton gave up the eighth and ninth Boston runs in the sixth. He did it by walking Cramer, pitching a single to Vosmik and a long double to Foxx.

The Nats meanwhile were having a harrowing time of it against Ostermueller. They didn't make even a serious threat to score until the eighth. Pinch Hitter Charley Gelbert started that inning with a single to center, and Case got his third hit of the day, a single to left. Gelbert took third on Vosmik's error and scored another run in the ninth after Myer beat out a bunt, but the rally fell exactly seven runs short.

Eastern Nine Plays Anacostia Today in Interhigh Series

Wilson Plays Western Nine In Other Tilt

White Tide's 20-Year Record Hovers Upon Brink of Disaster In Battle Today

By Bill Burnett.

The city's proudest high school baseball record hovers on the well-worn brink of disaster today when Eastern's White Tide, never lower than fourth in final rankings in 20 years of interhigh activity, moves its overabundance of talent against a renovated Anacostia nine at Eastern. Starting time is 3:30.

In the other division of the series, the West, a second battle between Western and Wilson takes place on the former's lot, this time with the last chance for a division title at stake.

Coach Chief Guyon, whose sharp eyes have watched a long and brilliant procession of Eastern diamonders pass through the school, is probably the first to realize what is happening to his team. It's about to be kicked into the second division by an Anacostia club making its second series start, and Guyon's sentiment is that "they can't do this to me."

Lund Optimistic

If Guyon's record for winners is any indication they won't do it to him, either. Eastern captured ten undisputed titles in the last two decades and tied for a couple of others and Guyon had a lot to do with most of them.

In opposition to Guyon's confidence, however, is the unquenchable optimism of Anacostia's Roland Lund. He has two close, hard-earned series victories behind him and knows that barring a complete collapse his little Indians are a shoo-in. They whipped Eastern once already, and that will be in their favor today.

Then, too, Anacostia has three of last year's first stringers back after the release of grades two weeks ago. Berry Seaman moves into the short-stop position to supplement Joe Sorrel, an inexperienced youngster; Dicky Farr takes over the backstop spot, moving Joe Hayes to the outfield, and Otis Scott will be ready for first base if young Elmer Leukhardt falters.

Near Title

If Anacostia wins today, nothing short of a quarantine can take the east section title from it. If Eastern wins, it still has a chance for a playoff, or even a victory in the regular season.

Western has the best chance of winning the second-place playoff in the west loop. It beat Wilson, 8 to 3, less than two weeks ago, with enough power left over to walk a run across in the ninth. Herman Byer, Wilson's waggle-handed hurler, was blasted from the mound in that contest, and Joe Wells pitched a creditable game therein.

Figuring Wells may have the Raiders' number, Coach Carl Heintzel will probably start the left-handed artist today against Carmel Nance. As both clubs have won two and lost two, the loser's crown prospects will be almost nil.

W. & L. Nine Defeats G.W. High, 13 to 12

Average Previous Setback at Hands Of Presidents' Team

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Alexandria, May 15.—Washington and Lee High School tossers shoved over three runs in the eighth inning to come from behind and take a 13-12 decision from the George Washington High nine here this afternoon, avenging a previous setback at the hands of the Presidents and throwing the race for Northern Virginia "Big Three" honors into a two-way tie.

An inopportune change in pitchers apparently cost the Presidents the victory in the eighth inning, when the Little Generals greeted Johnny Murnane with two successive singles to tie the score with a pair of runs, and then added the winning tally on a walk and a wild pitch. Prior to Murnane's entry into the game, Lawrence Gardner had hurled three innings of shutout ball for the Presidents, but he was yanked by Coach Doran when he allowed two runners to reach base on an infield error and a scratch single.

The game was a see-saw affair throughout, with the Presidents taking a 3-run lead in the first inning, and then losing the advantage when the Little Generals got to Ed Howland for four runs in the third, four more in the fourth and two in the fifth.

George Washington got back into the ball game by driving over four runs in the sixth, and then took over the lead in the seventh with a five-run barrage. At this point, the Little Generals hopped on Relief Pitcher Murnane for the winning margin.

Clement, Washington and Lee's starting pitcher, was forced out of the ball game in the fourth when he was hit on his throwing arm by one of Nowland's pitches. Olsen took over, but lasted only one and a third innings, and Johnson came in to finish out the game and receive credit for the victory.

The Little Generals nicked George Washington's three hurlers for 14 hits, while the Presidents drove out an even dozen safeties, one of which was a home run by First Baseman Stan Heflin.

French topped the Little General offensive with three hits in five trips to the plate, while Shepherd accounted for three for six and McPherson drove out a pair of doubles.

Parker led the George Washington attack with two singles in four trips to the plate.

—On Fishing

There are a few scattered blues being caught along the Maryland coast. Hardly enough to get excited about now, but another week should tell a different story. The same is true of channel bass. Catches have been made at widely separated points. Bryan Travis, fishing the hole off Cape Charles, has made several nice days with the big bronze backs—with them good catches of sea trout and croakers.

ACKERMAN

Capt. Travis has just been made a game warden, to assist patrolling Cape waters in an effort to keep trawlers outside the 3-mile limit. The Virginia Conservation Commission also has a boat in this work, while just last week the Federal Government stationed a revenue cutter for the same purpose.

We have never thought that the trawlers were responsible for keeping many sportsmen and commercial men as well. And, as if to substantiate their claims, croakers and sea trout have been and are coming in the Chesapeake in great numbers. We haven't known the latter species to arrive in upper bay waters this early for many a season. Yet they are here, for a gill-netter lifted five fine ones in Herring Bay on Saturday. Trout have been caught in many places along the Eastern Shore.

Spot have been caught in the Patuxent at Benedict, as well as in the bay, another arrival that is much ahead of the usual time. So it might be that there is something to the trawlers stopping the fish in the 20-mile stretch between the Capes. Most certainly they should be kept off where they belong, for in addition to tearing up the bottom, everything that comes within the side boards of the trawl is grist for the mill.

At the same time, something might well be done about the pound nets in the mouth of the bay, stretched one after another, with just the bare legal distance between. Nets that in other years have taken a toll beyond belief of small trout which, because they are unmarketable, are lost to sportsman and marketman alike.

Fine catches of rock have been made in the Choptank and near Bloody Point in the mouth of Eastern Bay. Nothing out of the ordinary, for with conditions just right stripers are taken almost through the winter at both these points. They probably will be taken daily in increasing numbers in the Potomac above Joe Fletchers. At the Conowingo Dam in Maryland they are in great schools, and swimming with them are cats, perch, and some shad.

White perch and catfish are running in fine shape up the river as well as down. Anglers fishing Mattawoman Creek from Sweden Point have been bringing in catches running as high as 75—all large fish.

The seabass and porgies are on the gravel beds off Ocean City. Capt. Jesse Bloxam caught 300 pounds on his first trip out the past week. Wachaprague, however, continues to be the one place to be sure of catching large numbers of seatrout.

There was no stocking of trout in Maryland streams during the past week, but there will be this week. There was some swell fishing in Frederick County streams regardless, and since the weather has been a little more settled we haven't heard so much about Maryland not stocking her waters.

Bob Edge, Columbia's fishing commentator, expects to visit them this coming week-end to get pictures. Another New Yorker, John Alden Knight, author of the Solunar Tables, spent several days on them not long ago. And rated the waters he fished the equal of those in New York State.

Conococheague Club, of Hagerstown, will hold its outing at Hoover's Club House on the Potomac on May 25. Tomorrow night, Wednesday, May 17, the regular meeting of the Bethesda-Chevy Chase Chapter Ike Waltons in the National Capital Field Trial Club House on Bradley boulevard. Plans for the invitation casting tournament at Lewiston, on Sunday May 21.

Foxcroft Horse Show Honors To Miss Smith

Wins Second Leg On Davis Challenge Cup at Middleburg

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Middleburg, Va., May 15.—With a splendid performance that won the applause of hundreds of sporting people from all sections of the country gathered on the horse show grounds of Foxcroft School today, Nancy Penn Smith, daughter of Mrs. W. Plunkett Stewart, of Philadelphia, repeated her triumph of last year in the Alumnae Davis Challenge Cup class and won the second leg on the handsome trophy. Miss Smith is a 1937 Foxcroft graduate and has won many honors for her excellent riding.

Second place went to Mary Rumsey, of The Plains; third to Alice Whitney, of Far Hills, N. Y., and fourth to Miss Rosalie Noland, of New York.

Excellent performances and skillful riding were seen today at the school's annual exhibition. Nineteen well-filled classes were on the program. Many handsome cups were awarded for achievements in riding made during the school year. Ideal weather prevailed and the beautiful setting never looked lovelier than today.

The Greble Cup presented for the greatest improvement in riding during 1938-39 was won by Adelaide Cole, of Corning, N. Y. The Mackubin Cup given for the best horsemanship shown in 1938-38 was won by Ruth McCormick, of Albuquerque, N. Mex., and the Whitney Cup sented for good hands shown in 1938-39 was awarded to Anne Gambrill, of New Jersey.

An interesting class on the program was the one shown over the Italian course. The girls piloted their mounts in a splendid manner over the many intricate jumps. The blue ribbon was pinned on Super Play, owned and ridden by Kitty Smith, of Baltimore. The Touch and Out class, always interesting to spectators, was keenly watched today.

Virginia Ends Home Season With Victory

Charlottesville, Va., May 15.—In the last home game of the season, Virginia won from Virginia Polytechnic Institute today, 5 to 2, to remain undefeated among the State's "big four."

Today's contest was a light-hitting affair, each team collecting but five hits. The Cavaliers drove Southpaw Owen from the mound in the third inning, during which all five of their runs were scored. With the bases loaded, Gosney cleared the bags with a slashing two-bagger. Sargeant's triple scored Gosney, and then Dormer tallied on a fielder's choice.

George Warriner, a big right-hander, finished the game for the Gobblers and yielded but one hit, a single by Sargeant.

Coach Tebell used three twirlers, and Tech's two runs were scored off Walter Smith in the sixth frame. Pierce opened with a two-base clout down the third-base line, Durvin was safe on Gosney's fumble, the former registered as a fielder's choice, and the latter on Trice's single.

Cuccias Picked To Set Stroke For Navy Crew

Coach Shakes Up Middies to Give Varsity Boat Weight

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, May 15.—Although he did not earn a seat in the plebe boat last year and had not rowed in a race prior to this season, Francis Cuccias, 169-pound New York City youth, has been picked by Coach Buck Walsh to set the stroke in the Adams Cup race, which will be rowed at Cambridge Mass., against Harvard and Pennsylvania, next Saturday.

Determined to get more weight and strength on the port side, which had to be helped out a lot by the helmsman in the losing race against Cornell, Walsh has replaced Tom Walker by Cuccias and put Roy Anderson, a veteran of three seasons, at No. 2, in place of Sheldon Kinney, sophomore, who was given a seat when Hank Vaughan dropped out.

Walsh has also shifted coxswains, Harold Graham being promoted from the jayvee to the varsity boat, and Virgil Hancock, who has held the lines in all three races so far, taking his place with the juniors.

The two changes of oarsmen gives the senior boat a little more weight in each case. Walker has been rowing at 168 pounds and Cuccias, who has developed in strength and rowing ability since last year is 3 pounds heavier. Anderson weighs 180, 10 pounds more than Kinney, and is one of the veterans of the squad. He has had the experience of a year in the plebe boat and two years with the jayvees.

The squad will leave for Cambridge next Thursday evening.

Qualifying Revised for National Public Links Tourney

D.C. Entrants To Qualify In Baltimore

33 Sectional Places Adopted; Method Used in U. S. Open And Amateur Events

By Merrell W. Whittlesey.

The United States Golf Association announced a revised method of qualifying for the National Public Links championship yesterday, starting with the eighteenth annual tournament in Baltimore, July 24-29, whereby the entrants will have to qualify in 33 sectional places, the same method used in the Open and Amateur.

Washington entrants will qualify in Baltimore, June 40, over the scene of the National championship, the Mount Pleasant municipal course, with the entrants from the host city. The field in the qualifying rounds will determine the number of places to the championship proper.

Heretofore qualifying rounds were held in all major cities and any other location where there was sufficient interest, with each place limited to four qualifiers. The fields became unruly on this basis with the growth of tournament competition among the municipal players, and the change was necessary.

Other Changes

The intercity team championship competition for the Harding Trophy, formerly awarded to the low-scoring quartet from a city, has also been changed, and now the three low qualifiers from any city in the sectional qualifying rounds will be the team representatives.

Former champions will be exempt from qualifications but must win one of the three low berths in order to represent their city in the team competition.

The U. S. G. A. has not set any fee for the entrants but the district supervisor may set any fee up to $3 per entrant, to help defray expenses to the tournament.

Forms will be provided for the entrants, with entries closing four days before District's qualifying rounds. Tommy Doerer, jr., East Potomac manager, will handle the local field and forward the entries to Baltimore.

Receives Medal

As in the National Amateur qualifying rounds, the medalist will receive a medal.

The public links championship of this city was run in conjunction with the qualifying rounds for the national event in previous years, with the low scorer city champion and the low four players representing the city at the expense of S. G. Leoffler.

Now, with the method of play changed, it will be necessary to hold a separate city championship.

Virginia entrants may also qualify in Baltimore, as no qualifying spot was awarded the Old Dominion, nor Delaware. The Virginia players may go to North Carolina, as Asheville and Durham will hold sectional tests.

Approximately 200 players will be eligible for the championship proper.

Navy Announces 2 Sports Schedules

Annapolis, May 15.—The Navy's soccer and cross-country dates for next fall, including matches with the Army in both sports, were announced today. The Service School soccer teams will meet at Annapolis on November 30, and the cross-country teams, with Princeton and Columbia as traditional entrants, at New York City, October 28.

The varsity schedules are as follows, all matches to take place at the Naval Academy unless otherwise stated:

Varsity Schedule

Soccer—October 11, Gettysburg; 13, Lehigh; 18, Duke; 21, Cornell; 28, Yale (at New Haven). November 4, Pennsylvania State; 11, Dartmouth; 30, Army.

Cross-country—October 21, University of Maryland; 28, Army; Princeton, Columbia (quadrangular) at New York City, November 3, University of Pennsylvania. University of North Carolina (at Chapel Hill).

The Plebe Schedules

Soccer—October 25, Mount St. Joseph's High School; November 1, Catonsville High School; 8, Baltimore City College; 11, Patterson Park High School; 18, Sparrows Point High School; 29, Baltimore Poly.

Cross-country—October 21, University of Maryland freshmen; November 3, University of Pennsylvania freshmen; 11, Mercersburg Academy.

Terp Freshmen Win Lacrosse, 7-6

The Friends School of Baltimore bowed to the Maryland University Freshmen lacrosse team, 7-6, yesterday at College Park. The game was the last of the season for the Terps. Al Siesinger shot six goals for Maryland, including the game-winning one in the last minute of play.

The lead changed hands twice and up until the end it was hotly contested. Thorsby and Wallace scored twice for Friends.

Lafayette To Play Terp Nine Today

Maryland Opens Two-Game Road Trip On Easton Diamond

By Jack Munhall.

Nearing the close of a brilliant season, the University of Maryland baseball team left last night for Easton, Pa., where this afternoon it opens a two-game road trip with Lafayette before returning to College Park for Saturday's finale with Georgetown.

Assured, no matter what their fate in the last three games, of a highly successful record, the Terps carry an eight-game winning streak into today's engagement with the Leopards. A winning streak which should be intact when they move over to Rutgers tomorrow for a return contest with the New Yorkers.

Either Earl (Lefty) Spring or the right-handed Pershing Mondorff is expected to go against Lafayette, with the other working against Rutgers. Springer, like his Maryland mates, has a remarkable victory string to protect, for the slender Hagerstown, Md., junior has breezed through six games without defeat.

Mondorff has won five and lost one, and while that record is not so impressive as Springer's, it is even more surprising because at the beginning of the campaign the broad-beamed football star was just another candidate. He had barely earned his varsity letter as utility infielder the previous year. Only one pitching appearance did he make in 1938 and the less said of that, the better.

The Georgetown game, second of the season between the rabid local rivals, looms as just another game now, for the Hoyas have fallen rapidly from the high caste that was theirs the first two weeks of the season. It was Burt Shipley's nine, incidentally, that started the Hilltoppers' collapse which has produced four defeats in seven games.

A five-game Georgetown winning streak was smashed when Maryland upset Joe Judge's pets, 8-6, with a late-inning rally at the Hilltop, and from that time on the Hoyas have never looked like the same club. Their pitching suddenly soured. Their infield developed more leaks than a strainer, and even their batting punch faded. The upshot was, after beating American University's outclassed Eagles for the second time, Georgetown absorbed successive beatings from New York University, Fordham and Army on a three-day road trip, staggered to victory over Navy, and then lost to Washington and Lee.

So now G. U.'s record stands at seven victories and five setbacks—the poorest showing of any of the Hoya nines Judge has handled.

Clemson Grads 'Whoop It Up' For D. C. Invasion by Tigers

Plans for Big Time Mapped at Banquet; 2,100 Cadets to Converge on Capital November 4 for G. W. Game

By Al Hailey.

Plans for a collegiate invasion of Washington next fall were formulated last night by Washington alumni of Clemson College at a dinner at which the South Carolina institution's head coach, Jess Neely, appeared to talk football and eat seafood with the local boys.

Invading forces will be the entire cadet corps of Clemson— 2,100 strong, band and all, Edgar Morris, chairman of the alumni transportation committee, announced.

Occasion will be the Clemson football game with George Washington University in Griffith Stadium November 4—the first since 1934, when the two elevens fought to a 0-0 tie here.

"Why it'll be gigantic, stupendous and collosal—in fact, it will be the biggest thing you ever saw," declared Morris, bringing into play the vernacular of the circus and the film industry.

The former men of Clemson beamed at this—envisioning turning Washington into a college town for the day wiht parades and spontaneous pep meetings in hotel lobbies. Whether there will be girl drum majors was not learned, as some one began a chant for seafood at this point.

The Clemson eleven will make its first appearance in these parts against the United States Naval Academy October 28 in Annapolis.

A committee to figure out methods of carting the Clemson Cadet Corps to Washington was named, consisting of Morris, chairman; Capt. Floyd Parks, aid to Gen. Malin Craig; T. L. W. Bailey, J. E. Cudd, Willard L. Hart and Sandy Todd.

After sitting through three motion picture reels showing the Clemson eleven in action against Tulane University, South Carolina and Tennessee last fall, alumni heard a discourse on the 1939 situation from Coach Neely.

"Boys, I got worries, I lost 12 lettermen last June," lamented Neely. He confessed, however, that the new football edition will not be anything to scoff at and, as a matter of fact, is likely to live up to its reputation for bowling over the big college teams fall.

A hasty poll of these assembled in Naylor's Maine avenue seafood emporium, however, bolstered the momentary letdown among the 75 old grads who turned out, and a quartet of doubtful barytones was getting under way in one corner as the last shrimp disappeared.

Shepherd Loses To Massanutten

Woodstock, Va., May 15.—Massanutten Military Academy won a 9-to-8 victory over Shepherd College of Shepherdstown, W. Va., here this afternoon. The score was tied three times and the winning run came in the last half of the ninth, when Finge singled and scored on a double by Colsten. Vernon King hurled for Massanutten and led the winners at bat with four base hits.

Conn, Seeking Weight, to Part With Tonsils

Hopes to Crash Heavy Ranks With Pounds Added by Operation

By the Associated Press.

Pittsburgh, May 15.—Battling Billy Conn's goal is the heavyweight championship, and he's heading his campaign in that general direction starting with the removal of his tonsils.

Only 21 and averaging about 173 pounds, the gangling pride of East Liberty said today "the doctors tell me I may put on 15 or 20 pounds after the tonsils are out."

If things turn out that way, he beamed, "then I'll have a try at Joe Louis."

Conn, because he is still growing and is reputed to have the best left hand in the boxing business, has been regarded as something of a "white hope" and as the fighter who eventually may beat Louis for the heavyweight crown.

For a time he was a middleweight in this paradise of middleweights—Frank Klaus, George Chip, Harry Greb and Teddy Yarosz, to mention a few. Now he is more of a light-heavyweight. Last Friday he engaged in his last fight against a middleweight, beating Solly Krieger, of Brooklyn, in New York's Madison Square Garden.

Some of Conn's backers in his home town doubt he will put on enough weight to become a good heavyweight, but Billy is actually jubilant about the tonsilectomy. The operation will be Wednesday, and meanwhile the fighter hopes his manager, Johnny Ray, will arrange a fight with Melio Bettina, recognized in New York as the light-heavyweight champion.

Conn was enthusiastic, too, about a "new punch" he used against Krieger, one that he described as "a short right uppercut inside."

He explained he used it "around the eyes in close" at the suggestion of his manager. But his left jab, the one he used so effectively in all his important fights, is still his favorite.

"In fact, it's my best," said Billy.

Mamakos May Win No. 2 Spot Over Zanelli

Local Boxing Picture Goes 'Round as Moguls Debate Fight Situation

The old story of "well, look who my boy has knocked slap-happy" was thrown into the local boxing picture yesterday in the case of Steve Mamakos vs. Ralph Zanelli—the fight scheduled to send the District's outdoor boxing card off in a blaze of glory May 22 at Griffith Stadium.

It all begins after a look at the records showed that Mamakos, the Washington welterweight, may honor his home town, stepping into the No. 2 challenger's spot if he subdues Zanelli, the rugged Boston and Providence puncher.

The facts of the case center about what Promoter Joe Turner's cohorts called an "international argument" between members of the National Boxing Association's ratings board.

"Title Prospect"

Opposing counsel are Ed Foster, national secretary of the National Boxing Association, and Col. Heinie Miller, chairman of the board and District Boxing Commission secretary.

"Zanelli is the best welterweight in New England and a great title prospect," said Foster, secretary of the Rhode Island Boxing Commission, to Miller—speaking, incidentally, through the Turner-Ahearn fight combine.

"Phooey," gently chided Miller. "Washington has a lad who is going places and will make your man Zanelli look very ill. His name's Mamakos.

All this chitchat ended with Zanelli dropping out of the list of honorable mentions and Mamakos moving into the No. 6 spot—the best welterweight rating ever held by a Washington fighter.

Defeated Phil Furr

Foster, however, pointed out Zanelli had beaten the esteemed Phil Furr. Miller then called attention to Mamakos' victories over Pimpinella, Jesserun and recently Mickey Makar. He also pointed out Mamakos had beaten Georgie Abrams, who had beaten Teddy Yarosz, who had beaten Billy Conn—who Friday night defeated Middleweight Champion Solly Krieger.

Mamakos stands to move into the No. 2 spot as the result of the beating suffered recently by Fritzie Zivic, the No. 2 man, at the hands of Kenny La Salle, an unknown who had been beaten by Mexican Kid Azteca, eighth ranking welter.

Concludes Training Here

Miller said last night that with a victory over Zanelli, Mamakos will better his rating and possibly become No. 2 when the N. B. A.'s June ratings come out.

Meanwhile, Mamakos will conclude his training sessions here at the National Guard Armory this week, Zanelli will come to town to put on a series of public workouts and Miller and Foster will sit by biting their nails until May 22 proves who was right—at least, that's how the imaginative firm of Turner-Ahearn sees it.

Hader Developing Antiairplane Spin Hold for Londos

An antiairplane-spin hold designed to confound Jim Londos Thursday night at Turner's Arena will be perfected this week by Jack Hader, he confidently informed all who cared to listen yesterday.

Hader, who will attempt to subdue Londos in what is billed as a world's championship match, held a public workout yesterday in the W street arena with Al Bakhsh, the Kansas "hate man's" chief handler and conditioner since he came to Washington three months ago.

JIMMY LONDOS

Claiming his new hold will enable him to break away from the airplane spin—Londos' well-known method of finishing off his opponents—Hader told Promoter Joe Turner he will surprise the Golden Greek by coming down on him with a strange and bizarre head hold.

Double Header Opens Ballston Season Tonight

Girls' Softball Teams Start at 8; Men Play Metro Opener at 9

The night softball season at Ballston Ball Park, 1 mile beyond Clarendon, Va., will open officially tonight with a double attraction—a game between girls' tens at 8 o'clock, followed by a man's game at 9.

The girls' Arlington Aces will open against the Commerce Department girls, and the Arlington Democrats men's team will open the Metro Night League against the Standard Linen ten in the second game.

A play-by-play description of the game will be broadcast over the public address system especially installed for the night games. Softball games will be played on Tuesday and Friday nights through the season.

Undefeated in six starts, the Standard Linen ten is now leading the Sunday Morning Loop, while the Arlington ten has played and won one game this season.

Use of Ballston field can be obtained by calling Glen Leyde, 864 North Woodrow street, Arlington, at Chestnut 1853.

Broken Down Jalopies Are Headed for Junk Heap as All Autos Must Pass Rigid Tests From Horn Button to Emergency Brake

By Howard F. Wentworth.

A new business is ready to open up in Washington—a business designed to pay dividends in human lives. The city is going to sell motoring safety to its citizens on the largest scale yet attempted, and in return expects to profit by a reduced toll of highway casualties.

While authorities prepare plans to eliminate evils at various "suicide corners," The Post turns to the forthcoming annual com- requirements or retire from circulation. The broken down jalopies are headed for the junk pile. Cars

Dizzy Dame Wins Inaugural Feature at Charles Town Track

Huge Crowd Of D. C. Fans On Hand

By Walter Haight.
A Staff Correspondent.

Charles Town, W. Va., May 15.—Racing returned to this panhandle of West Virginia between the Potomac and Shenandoah rivers today with a crowd of 6,000 witnessing the sport under ideal conditions, with a record Monday trainload from Washington, the wagering was well ahead of opening day last year and the competiton on the track was keen in most instances. The camera had to be caled into play six times during the afternoon.

Herbert (Dynamite) Kerr, owner and trainer who operated with success on the Maryland milers, transferred his fit Dizzy Dame here and she drove to a thrilling victory in the $800 Inaugural Purse, the day's feature attraction. The 5-year-old mare, a winner at Pimlico, had to show all her racing guns, however, to down Mrs. E. L. Bull's Tuleyries Lin by a neck margin in a photo finish. Capt. Ewart Johnston's Royal Business was third in another photo finish which forced Air Win into fourth place.

Dizzy Dame's victory was a popular one for she was installed as odds-on favorite in the field of six and brought her backers a return of $3.80 for the usual deuce. She stepped the 6½ furlongs in creditable 1:20 2-5.

Tuleyries Lin, back on the home grounds and showing exceptional speed, set the early pace, with Dizzy Dame close up. The ultimate winner, ridden by Jockey Mannie Berg, who came here for the single mount, was steadied along. Entering the stretch, Tuleyries Lin still had a length lead, but Dizzy Dame, put to a hand drive, came to wear her rival down. Royal Business was forced wide at the turns and closed with a rush when clear in the stretch.

John A. Manfuso's Accidental made it two victories in as many starts this year when she refused to quit under a strong ride by Jockey Lou Machado. She won by a neck over Strumming, with Waugh Pop third, in the fourth race.

A heavily played favorite and a long shot teamed to produce a $72.20 pay-off in the daily double. Suneen, owned and trained by Johnny Bejshak, the former jockey, took the second race at $4, while Sundrops, at $27.80, accounted for the third race.

Zoic Is Winner At Suffolk Downs

Boston, May 15 (AP).—H. E. Enger's Zoic, staging a comeback in stake circles this season, surprised a fast field of sprinters in the $5,000 Plymouth Rock Handicap to score by a head as Suffolk Downs opened its 60-day meeting today before a crowd of almost 20,000.

Sweeping into the lead in the first sixteenth of the 6 furlong event, which carried a net value of $4,470, Zoic never was headed, holding off Tom Heard, jr., Be Blue over the final eighth. Only a neck behnd Be Blue was J. Yancey Christmas' Rought Time, which closed fast to take the show from A. C. C. Stable's favored Sun Egret.

The winner covered the distance in 1:12 and paid $12.80, $5.80 and $4.00. Be Blue returned $5.40, $3.60, while Rough Time paid $3.80.

Downs to Get More Seats, Bleachers

Louisville, Ky., May 15 (AP).—Col. Matt J. Winn said today he would recommend to the board of directors of Churchill Downs that 500 more boxes and additional reserved seats be built and the 50-cent bleachers be "doubled" in size before the 1940 Derby.

Winn, president of the American Turf Association, which owns Churchill Downs, Latonia track at Latonia, Ky., and Lincoln Fields track at Chicago, said attendance at the Derby May 6 was "over 80,000," a record attendance for the classic.

Winn left today or the spring meeting at Lincoln Fields, which opens May 25.

The Fighter Wins Haylands Purse

Churchill Downs, May 15 (AP).—Warm second choice in the betting, W. F. Morgan's The Fighter has the fastest 6 furlongs of the spring meeting to account for the Haylands Purse, today's feature event.

Closing fast through the stretch, the 6-year-old son of Bulldog had a length advantage at the wire over Diviana's Torchy, which had alternated the early running with John Marsch's Lightspur. The latter quit to nothing in the closing strides as Jess Spencer's Neighbor nipped him for the show.

The winner's time for the 6 furlongs was 1:12 flat. His backers received $6.80 for a $2 ticket.

7-Up Meets Motors TomorrowatEllipse

The 7-Up Athletic Club will meet Russell Motors tomorrow at 5 p. m. on the North Ellipse in an Industrial League game. Manager "Huck" Hillear will pitch his star lefthander, "Lefty" Brown, while Manager "Connie" Wyche will send in "Lefty" McIntire.

Thursday night 7-Up will oppose the fast semipro team managed by Lou Blue, formerly of the Detroit Tigers, at Ballston Stadium in Ballston, Va. Lanny Birch will draw the pitching assignment, with James Schwab catching. The game will start at 8:15. All 7-Up players are requested to meet at Tenth and R streets northwest not later than 6:30.

Bill Bennings

At the Post

Charles Town, W. Va., May 15.
Dear Al:

I was willing to let the Preakness die a natural death but the alibis of the writers who went overboard on Johnstown before the race are sickening. (I picked Johnstown too.) The truth of the matter is that the track was not muddy. Yes, there was some water on the top but the oval was somewhere between good and slow. Just take a glance at the time on that race won by Domkin just before the Preakness. This colt won in 0:55 2-5 on a fast track and won in 0:55 3-5 last Saturday. Johnstown ran perfectly in the Preakness as far as he went. He did not appear to be laboring and had the same smooth action with three-quarters of the race behind him that he showed at Louisville. The difference was that Johnstown in the Preakness was looked in the eye by a couple of horses and stopped. I believe he is one of those horses who will run until challenged. This may look like second guessing, but you may recall that The Post report on the Derby had Challedon bumped by Technician. Then again Challedon needed the Derby to fit him for the Preakness. In my book, Challedon will go on whipping Johnstown on any kind of track. Johnstown quit. You can have him. There's a baseball diamond in the infield here for suspended jockeys. The mutuel clerks are still laughing about the fellow who came up to a window at Pimlico last Saturday and asked for a $2 ticket on No. 140. He was trying to play the weight on one of the steeplechase horses. Here's the list of jockeys given licenses here: Apprentice Jockeys B. Everson, R. Bernhardt, A. Balducci, C. Kirk, R. Thomas, V. Villabolo, E. Churchill, A. Cole, G. Cardoza, D. Hamer, J. Peck. Jockeys M. Berg, O. Brown, W. Dufford, E. O. Johnson, F. Law, H. Lauch, E. Hoffman, L. Garrett, F. Faust, B. Hacker, R. Klein, W. Kirk, C. Maloney, L. Machado, B. Masshio, F. Munoz, S. Palumbo, R. Root, H. Snyder, W. Snyder, J. A. Taylor, J. Shanks, G. Witmer, A. DiLiddo, W. Obert.

BILL.

First race—Lady Buck likes this short sprint route and was a keen one here last fall. Breaks off the rail, and with a good ride may take it all. Pandoramint downed a fair field here last year. Prefers an off track, but must be respected. Anneke belongs with this kind.

Second race—Cats Cradle has been primed right here in the grounds and likes the abbreviated sprint course. Packs plenty of speed and needs onlyq a share of the racing luck. Blue Prelude likes bad going but has worked well. Dixie S. showed little on the milers but will be ad ifferent proposition.

Third race—Top Shell breaks off the rail and has the speed to make the most of that position. Raced at Pimlico and is fit. Boro Poker is reported fit and is a tough horse around these parts. Justa Jimmie to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Fernbrake raced fairly well on the milers and gets in this with moderate weight. Needs only to get off the "also eligible" list. Asterisk has speed and likes the distance. Howellville has been working well and could be a serious contender.

Fifth race—Nathan Hale carries top weight of 117 among the eligibles for the test but seems to have something on the company. With good racing luck this fellow should take it all. Shanteb has plenty of foot and needs attention. Truthfully for the show end.

Sixth race—Miss Epe promises to do a lot of running in this field. Palumbo is slated to ride and I'm going to string along. Tuleyries Lad belongs with this kind and is dangerous. Flashing Steel has shown good time in the trials.

Seventh race—Happy Road seems ideally placed in this distance affair. Seems capable of handling the 118 pounds. Elsie J. raced well in Maryland. Pencader always goes in good fashion hereabouts.

Eighth race—Clever Girl comes over from the milers and appears headed for the chief end of the purse. War Rumor promises to go good. Springs Here has plenty of early speed but may stop.

Best bet—Happy Road.

U. S. Incomes Turn Upward After Decline

Rises During March After Falling for 4 Consecutive Months

New York, May 15.—After declining for four consecutive months, the national income produced in the United States rose from $4,552,000,000 in February to $4,773,000,000 in March, according to the Alexander Hamilton Institute today. The national income in March was 11.3 per cent larger than in the same month last year when it amounted to $4,290,000,000. March was the fifth consecutive month in which the national income has been larger than in the corresponding period a year ago.

The increase over a year ago was slightly smaller in March than in February, however. The increase in February was 11.9 per cent as compared with the increase of 11.3 per cent in March. The national income in the first quarter amounted to $14,332,000,000 this year, as against $12,883,000,000 last year, an increase of 11.2 per cent.

Price Level Lower

Information so far available suggests that the national income in April may have been somewhat smaller than in March. The price level in April was slightly lower than in March. Industrial activity showed a tendency to decline and it is possible that there was some curtailment in the shipment of agriculture products.

There is little indication, at the present time, that the national income will show much recovery during May and June. The prospect is that the national income in the first half of 1939 will be smaller than in the last half of 1938, although it promises to be somewhat higher than in the first half of last year. It is apparent, however, that the increase over the first half of last year will be rather moderate despite the fact that the national income a year ago was greatly depressed.

Lawyers to Give Course On Reorganization

Philadelphia, May 15 (AP).—Declaring "Congress should never have placed the great responsibility of reorganizing financially sick corporations upon the court," U. S. Judge George A. Welsh named four lawyers today to formulate a course of instructions on the science of reorganization to be given trustees he appoints. The lawyers will serve without pay.

Judge Welsh said he was impelled to take the step because affairs of companies in reorganization are really run by lawyers and the trustees are dummies."

Freight Discrimination Charged by Chrysler

The Chrysler Corporation notified the Interstate Commerce Commission yesterday that it intended to show in a forthcoming investigation that it had suffered discrimination in the structure of freight rates on new automobiles.

Parker McCollester, Chrysler counsel said in a letter to the commission that "it has been reported that others have endeavored to keep this issue from being raised in the present proceeding, but we will submit that it constitutes one of the principal issues as to the existing rate structure and that if not gone into the investigation will be incomplete, unfair to us, and preferential of our competitors."

Columbian Carbon Net Exceeds Year Ago

New York, May 15 (AP).—The Columbian Carbon Co. reported today for the three months ended March 31 a net profit of $829,878, equal to $1.54 a share on the common stock, compared with $707,155, or $1.32 a share, in the like period last year.

The company's chief natural gas production is in the Texas and Louisiana fields. In addition it has numerous carbon black plants in the South and Northeast.

Distant Options Lead Declines In Cotton Mart

New York, May 15 (AP).—Distant cotton deliveries, reversing Saturday's trend, dropped back today while May ended a zig-zag course to close 1 point lower. Final range was 1 to 13 points down. Despite expiration of the May contract tomorrow, liquidation in it was noticeably light as the trade bought at the 9-cent level. At New Orleans may ended at 8.94 for a net gain of 14 points.

Selling in distant deliveries was mostly in the form of hedging by domestic and foreign interests. Demand developed on price recessions. Speculative offerings also appeared. Brokers said this pressure was based on the theory present spot market levels for the staple might attract fair-sized amounts of cotton from Government loan stocks.

The Government consumption report—about at trade expectations—emphasized, according to analysts, poor mill demand.

Cottonseed Oil

Mild rallies in cottonseed oil futures were checked today, leaving final prices unchanged to 2 points up. Selling in December appeared when that delivery approached the 7-cent level.

Sales totaled 113 lots: May, 6.71; July, 6.75; September, 6.93†; October, 6.95†; December, 6.99†.

Crude oil was quoted 5½ cents bid in the Southeast and Valley and 5¼ to 5⅜ in Texas. A few cars sold in the Valley over the week-end at 5⅜ for deferred shipment and in Texas at 5⅜ cents.

Early Rally Carries July and September To Season's Highs

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 15.—Profit taking and selling based on rains in Canada resulted in lower wheat prices today but July and September contracts, representing the 1939 crop, reached the season's best level at 75¼ before the decline got under way.

An early return in which quotations advanced about 1½ cent was wiped out later and corresponding losses were substituted. The Winnipeg market was even weaker, showing losses of about 1½ cents at the close. Some of the selling there as well as in Chicago was credited to Eastern sources believed to be taking profits as a result of the recent price upturn.

May wheat in Chicago sagged as much as 1⅝ from an early high of 80 cents, within ¼ of the season's top, and closed 1¼-1⅜ lower than Saturday. There was no urgent purchasing of this contract although as yet no grain has been delivered and open interest remains above 5,000,000 bushels. July and September wheat closed ⅛-⅜ lower than Saturday at 74½-74⅝.

Corn finished unchanged to ⅜ off, July 51⅝-51¾, September 52⅜-52½; oats ⅞-1⅛ lower; rye unchanged to ⅜ down; lard 2 to 5 cents higher.

The Market

Price Changes Narrow in Dull Trading; Chartists Say Present Market Is a Test; Some Treasury Bonds Set New Peaks

New York, May 15.—The stock market today was nothing more than the second edition of Saturday's market. Prices held within an abnormally narrow range and only 334,600 shares changed hands, which made it the lightest trading since last May 5. The composite average of 100 stocks was off the negligible amount of 0.03 point and the difference between the day's high and low of this average was only a third of a point, which supplies an idea of the lack of important price changes.

Chartists tell us that the normal recovery after a sharp break usually falls within one-third and two-thirds, unless the market is changing its trend. At its present level the list is within this zone, the recovery being roughly 40 per cent. In other words, the technical traders, who look to charts and fit them to the rules of past performance, would look at the present market as one which is in a test area, and they would move with caution. Certainly everyone, the technical traders and those who ignore all the theories of speculation, are moving with caution at the present time and the brokers think they are not moving at all.

War Discounted

We have a situation where the factor which upset values a few weeks ago, namely the fear of a war abroad, has been largely discounted. But in its stead there is nothing in domestic business news which is of sufficient importance to stir the speculative mind. There is a period of drift, with important traders standing on the sidelines ready to jump in either direction and small traders doing little more than switching from one security into another.

Fluctuations of individual stocks meant nothing in today's trading. The list of the 15 most active stocks shows that the largest price change was a half point, a phenomenon that certainly has not presented itself recently even in the recent dull days.

The most active stock was Kroger Grocery, followed by the old-time leaders, United States Rubber and General Motors, each of which gained an eighth point. Bethlehem eased a fraction and United States Steel was unchanged. Montgomery Ward and Safeway eased slightly after their performance last week. Brooklyn Union Gas continued to be well supported, while New York Central led the rails in point of activity but held at about the same level. There was some support for Commercial Solvents among the chemicals.

Domestic News Lacking

Domestic trade news was not sufficiently inspiring to create any speculative demand. The important development on the bearish side was another drop in steel operations. The rate for this week, as announced by the American Iron and Steel Institute, was 45.4 per cent of capacity, compared with 47 per cent a week ago. This places operations at an eight months' low for a normal work week. It is more than 27 per cent below the November recovery peak and is the seventh consecutive decline that the industry has reported.

While news leans to the bearish side, sentiment in the financial district has undergone no startling change for the worse. Traders are doing little in the market but a good proportion of them lean to the belief that present prices have discounted the wealth of unfavorable news. In a large measure their calmer outlook is based on the temporary lessening of tension abroad. The speech by Mussolini received a favorable interpretation. The feeling downtown is that several critical dates have brought forth nothing to disturb confidence and that our present worries are domestic rather than foreign.

U. S. Bonds in Demand

Listed bond dealings today reflected modest inquiry for both investment and speculative obligations of the senior variety. The buying was on a small scale throughout, but offerings were even scarcer. In the upward tendency thus established, gains ranged from smallest fractions to 3 points. Foreign dollar securities were in general demand, while local tractions showed sharp improvement in the domestic section. High grade investment bonds merely continued their slow upswing with seven Treasury issues at highs for all time. Turnover amounted to $3,790,000, or about one-third of a normal day's business.

Another week-end without unfortunate developments in Europe occasioned fresh interest in foreign issues. The pacific speech by Premier Mussolini also helped. German and Italian bonds advanced readily on small trades, while Polish issues continued their improvement. Scandinavian and Belgian bonds were quiet, but Australians and Canadians moved ahead easily. The Japanese section was lower. Among Latin-American issues the trend was modestly upward.

Rails Steady

Medium-priced railroad bonds were steady, especially in the sections represented by the better-grade securities. Small advances were the rule, but a few offerings in the thin market made for losses elsewhere. Borderline and default rails were irregular. Local traction bonds were stimulated by the fresh indications of unification progress. Amusement bonds and communications issues were other good groups.

Among best-grade investment issues buying was still in progress for institutional account. Advances in United States Treasury issues ranged from 1-32 to 10-32 point, where active issues were concerned. The inactive 2s of 1947 made up for recent advances of the general market by a jump of more than a point. Guaranteed bonds were neglected while the decision was awaited on refunding of the HOLC 2¾s. Best-rated corporate bonds were better, where traded. The dullness was indicated, however, by a lack of business even in U. S. Steel debentures.

1.3 Billion U. S. Securities Sold Abroad in 5 Years

By the Associated Press.

Foreign buyers purchased about $1,300,000,000 of American corporate securities from 1933 through 1937.

The Securities Commission said yesterday that this total exceeds by about $400,000,000 the entire net increase in American corporate securities during the period. This, the report said, indicates net domestic holdings of American corporate securities declined by about $400,000,000

In the same period, net domestic holdings of foreign securities declined about $700,000,000.

Holdings of American corporate securities by insurance companies, savings banks, commercial banks and Government investment funds increased by more than $17,000,000,000.

Piling Up Arrears By the Utilities Criticized by SEC

By the Associated Press.

Robert E. Healy, acting chairman of the Securities Commission, said yesterday that "something has got to be done sooner or later" about utility holding companies which have allowed preferred dividends to accumulate.

"There are dozens of companies in the holding company field where arrearages on preferred dividends have piled up from three to five—and even eight years," Healy said in an interview.

SEC statistics show that on January 1, 1938, 48 of 158 registered holding companies had preferred stock arrearages amounting to about $336,000,000. The total par value of these stocks on which arrearages have piled up was about $1,330,000,000.

Two or three companies, Healy said, are trying voluntary reorganization to solve the arrearage problem. "They are taking an intelligent approach," he commented.

Asked what action the SEC might take to have companies pay up arrears, Healy replied: "One can't generalize about possible action. There are too many differences as between specific companies."

Boston Wool Market

Boston, May 15 (AP) (U. S. Dept. Agr.).—Users were showing interest today in further purchases of new wools direct from the country through Boston houses. A number of mills, however, were reported more hesitant than last week and some have withdrawn from the market for the moment, thus tending to narrow the outlet slightly compared with early last week. Prices on fleeces and on fine Western-grown wools offered for shipment direct from producing areas to users were firm at about the levels prevailing late last week.

Foundation Funds Total Over a Billion

Rockefeller Largest With Carnegie Corp. In Second Place

New York, May 15.—The capital assets of American foundations have grown to more than $1,200,000,000, according to a report published today by Raymond Rich Associates of New York, consultants to foundations, learned societies and other nonprofit institutions. The survey, embracing reports from the 243 leading foundations, is an extensive revision of an investigation by the Twentieth Century Fund.

One hundred and twenty-one foundations of the 243 surveyed, reported capital assets amounting to $945,443,637 as of the end of 1937, the latest year for which complete figures are obtainable. Although the other 122 foundations did not make public the extent of their assets, available information indicates that they aggregate some $250,000,000, bringing the total to about $1,200,000,000.

Rockefeller Leads

The Rockefeller Foundation reported the largest capital assets at the end of 1937—$184,435,516 or almost 20 per cent of the total reported for 121 funds. The Carnegie Corporation of New York ranks second with $163,841,376, or 17 per cent of the total. The assets in all cases are exclusive of land, buildings and equipment used by the reporting foundations.

Thirty-three foundations had capital assets of more than $4,000,000 each at the end of 1937. Other large ones, in addition to the Rockefeller Foundation and the Carnegie Corporation are: General Education Board, $54,607,431; the Commonwealth Fund, $51,830,504; the Kresge Foundation, $50,358,564; W. K. Kellogg Foundation, $46,609,613; Carnegie Institution of Washington, $36,-506,669, and the Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching, $29,031,848.

Of the 23 large foundations—among the 33 with more than $4,000,000 assets—that provided figures on their capital to the Twentieth Century Fund in 1934, approximately two-thirds, or 15, reported assets at the end of 1937 greater than at the end of 1934.

The greatest percentage increases in assets between 1934 and 1937 were shown by the John and Mary R. Markle Foundation, 332; the Chicago Community Trust, 41; the Josiah Macy, jr., Foundation, 34, and the John Simon Guggenheim Memorial Foundation, 31.

Duke Endowment

In arriving at the total of more than $1,000,000,000 for the capital assets of the 243 leading foundations, as of the end of 1937, the Rich Associates had to estimate the size of 122 nonreporting organizations upon the basis of what was known regarding them. The assets of the Duke Foundation, for instance, were estimated at $40,000,000 in 1924. To this, about $10,000,000 was added under the terms of the late James B. Duke's will.

Similar foundations for which accurate figures on capital assets are not available are the A. W. Mellon Educational and Charitable Trust, which has set aside $20,000,000 for the National Gallery of Art in Washington; the Horace H. Rackham and Mary A. Rackham Fund, which disbursed more than $2,000,000 in 1937, and Alfred P. Sloan Foundation, Inc.

Business Loans Gain $11,000,000 in Week

By the Associated Press.

Commercial, industrial and agricultural loans of banks in 101 leading cities increased $11,000,000 to a total of $3,852,000,000 in the week ended May 10.

The Federal Reserve Board said the increase followed an upward trend in New York, Chicago and other financial centers, and resumed a series of gains interrupted by small losses in the two preceding weeks.

Treasury Sales

The Treasury said yesterday that Government investment accounts sold $37,064,700 more Federal securities than they bought during April.

One of the Most Important Booklets Ever Published by The Washington Post Home Institute

TODAY IS LADIES' DAY

by FANNIE HURST

From a rich experience, from a broad understanding of women and their problems, Fannie Hurst has written many outstanding short stories and novels which include Lummox, Back Street, Mannequin, Four Daughters and countless others.

"Today Is Ladies' Day" is Fannie Hurst's personal message to women—to women of all ages, all temperaments.

This booklet is a compilation of Miss Hurst's philosophy of life. Every page carries inspiration; every paragraph glows with interest. For instance, one chapter is headed "Men Don't Make Girls Popular." Another chapter says "Be a Wanter." Another one is directed to "Mothers." Another to "Wives."

You, who want warm, friendly advice—want to read "Today Is Ladies' Day," by Fannie Hurst.

Official Notices

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, Washington, May 12, 1939. ORDERED: That the Traffic and Motor Vehicle Regulations for the District of Columbia be, and the same are hereby, amended as follows: Amend Part II, Article XIV, Section 71, paragraph (a) as follows: N STREET: Strike out the first clause under N Street which reads as follows: "From Twentieth to Eighteenth Streets, no parking on the north side between 8 and 9:30 a. m." 20TH STREET: Strike out the clause under 20th Street which reads as follows: "From Massachusetts Avenue to M Street, no parking on the east side between 8 and 9:30 a. m., except on Sundays and holidays." Amend Part II, Article XVII, Section 74, paragraph (a) as follows: 20TH STREET: Strike out the clause under 20th Street which reads as follows: "From Massachusetts Avenue to M Street, one way for southbound traffic between 7 and 9:30 a. m., except on Sundays or holidays." N STREET: Strike out the clause under N Street which reads as follows: "From Twentieth to Eighteenth Streets, one way for eastbound traffic from 7 to 9:30 a. m., except on Sundays or holidays," and insert in lieu thereof the following: "From Connecticut Avenue to Little 16th Street for eastbound traffic only and from Connecticut Avenue to 22nd Street for westbound traffic only." M. C. HAZEN, D. McCOACH, Jr., Commissioners, D. C.

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF Columbia, May 8, 1939. Notice is hereby given that under authority granted in Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, authorizing the closing of streets, roads, highways and alleys in the District of Columbia, and in accordance with the provisions of an item authorizing changes in the permanent system of highways contained in D. C. Appropriation Act for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1914, (Public Act No. 435, 62nd Congress) approved March 4, 1913, as amended by an act approved April 30, 1926, (Public Act No. 158, 69th Congress), the Commissioners of the District of Columbia will give a public hearing in the Board Room of said Commissioners in the District Building ON THURSDAY, MAY 25, 1939, AT 10 O'CLOCK A. M., to interested property owners to determine as to any property rights which may be affected, or as to the equity, justice or advisability of closing the street and alley area, and concerning the proposed changes in the permanent system of highways, all in the District of Columbia, and described as follows: 1. Closing West Virginia Avenue northeasterly from the intersection of New York Avenue and Montana Avenue, N.E.; and providing for a dedication of land for the widening of Queens Chapel Road between Bladensburg Road and Bryant Street, N.E. 2. Closing part of 24th Street immediately north of N Street, N.W., and closing the public alley 20 feet wide in Square 35 extending north from the alley running east and west in said square; and providing for a transfer to the District of Columbia for the widening of the alley running east and west in said square to 16 feet, and for the extension of 23rd Street northerly from its present northern terminus north of N Street, N.W., to the northerly line extended of the said proposed 16-ft. alley in said square. 3. Closing Calvert Street between 41st and 42nd Streets, N.W., and providing for a dedication of land for the extension of 40th Place and 41st Street between Benton and Calvert Streets, N.W., for the extension of W Street from its present western terminus west of 40th Street to 42nd Street, N.W., and for additional street and alley area in this section. 4. Proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways in the Northeast Section, providing for a relocation of 12th Street, proposed, through Parcels 130/3 and 142/2, south of W Street proposed. 5. Proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways in the Northeast Section, providing for the elimination of 18th Street between the southerly line of Webster Street and the northwesterly line of Michigan Avenue, as shown on said plan; and providing for a readjustment of said plan at Webster Street and Michigan Avenue as proposed in accordance with said plan. 6. Proposed change in the plan of the permanent system of highways affecting property in the Northwest Section lying north of Calvert Street and west of the easterly line of Adams Mill Road. Maps showing the street and alley area proposed to be closed and the additional land proposed to be acquired, and maps showing the proposed changes in the permanent system of highways, are on file in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, Room 400, District Building (same being known as Maps 2211, 2212, 2213, 2214, 2215 and 2216), and may be examined by interested parties during business hours prior to the hearing. Said maps will also be displayed at the hearing, and the Commissioners will consider any suggestions or protests concerning the proposed changes and the proposed street and alley closings, as shown on above-mentioned maps. Contract Bridge

By Mrs. A. M. Sobel.

Mrs. Sobel, a leading woman player, is a guest columnist for Florence Osborn, who is on a short vacation.

Every one has a "favorite hand," that is, a hand which gave them great pleasure or excitement, irrespective of the amount of profit involved. The average player's favorite hand, I fear, is usually a grand slam, doubled and redoubled, that he can lay down on the table and claim all the tricks. Experts don't feel that way about it (unless they are unusually mercenary). They want some triumph of mind over mind, usually some insidious piece of deception whereby they legitimately "flimflam" the enemy. My own "favorite hand" hardly measures up to this description, but it did give me a real thrill. Probably the fact that it occurred in a national tournament in Chicago some years ago contributed to this feeling. The hand is presented in today's box.

Today's Hand

Both Sides Vulnerable
NORTH DEALER

NORTH: ♠ A K 5 ♡ J 6 4 ◇ 7 6 3 2 ♣ A K 8
WEST: ♠ J 8 6 2 ♡ A Q 7 5 ◇ 10 8 5 ♣ J 6
EAST: ♠ Q 9 7 3 ♡ K 10 8 3 2 ◇ Q J 9 ♣ 2
SOUTH (Mrs. Sobel): ♠ 10 4 ♡ 9 ◇ A K 4 ♣ Q 10 9 7 5 4 3

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	Pass	2 ♣	Pass
3 ♣	Pass	5 ♣	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: 2 ♠.

I hold no brief for the bidding. My partner's opening diamond bid was, in my opinion, wrong—she should have started with one club. It is true, she had four honor tricks, but withal a pretty bare hand. If the opponents were to buy the contract, a diamond lead up to her seven-spot would probably be disastrous, whereas a club lead would be eminently safe. And, personally, I feel that a three-card suit headed by an ace-king is immeasurably superior to a four-card suit headed by a seven-spot. However, if partner had opened with a club, I never would have had the pleasure of playing the hand, so I suppose I should not complain.

Duck for Extra Trick

West opened the deuce of spades. After a glance at the dummy I saw that the contract itself was safe, but, naturally, since this was matchpoint duplicate, I looked for the possibility of scoring an extra trick. After a moment's thought I saw that possibility. Instead of putting up the spade ace or king from dummy, I played the five-spot. I had a faint hope that West had opened away from the queen-jack, but this was highly improbable and not the real point of my play. I was not at all surprised when East won with the queen, but I did hold my breath for the return lead. I hoped that the extreme diamond weakness in dummy would attract a diamond return and that is what happened. East led back the diamond queen—and who can blame him? Of course, I was still a long way from that extra trick; I would have to find an excellent break in diamonds, but at least now I had my chance. I won with the diamond ace, took out the trumps in two leads, then cashed the diamond king. I led my remaining spade to dummy's ace and on the spade king threw my four of diamonds. I then ruffed a diamond and, when both opponents followed, I was "home." I re-entered dummy with a trump and threw my losing heart on the established thirteenth diamond.

Of course, there was nothing very difficult or involved about this play, but somehow I liked the hand.

My partner admiringly related the details of the hand to one of the ranking experts and masculine-like, he paid me the highest compliment of his sex. "Say, that was a real he-man's play!"

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

The National Federation of Federal Employes has mounted the hustings in favor of the recommendations of the Advisory Committee on Education to provide free schooling for about 30,000 of "Uncle Sam's stepchildren"—children of Federal employes at Army and Navy stations, lighthouses, Indian reservations, national parks, etc.

The NFFE urges appropriation of sufficient funds to remedy a condition which the advisory committee called "unjust to many parents and children." Except in a few minor cases, a survey disclosed, there is no provision for educating these children, many of whom are ineligible for local schooling, because their families pay no local taxes, or else are too far from the schools to attend.

Actually, most of the youngsters do attend school, either by the suffrance of local taxpayers, who foot the bill unaided, or else the parents must pay tuition at private schools. The present Government policy on the subject, according to the report, is at best "haphazard," if, indeed, there is any policy at all.

The Office of Education has inaugurated a new series of radio broadcasts over the Columbia network, entitled "Democray in Action" to replace the prize-winning program "Americans All—Immigrants All," it was announced yesterday. The purpose of the series, Education Commissioner Studebaker said, is to "promote wider understanding of democratic processes . . . and to extend the values of the Federal exhibits at the New York World's Fair."

Without leaving the upholstered precincts of the Willard Hotel, A. J. Ted Meurer, native of Louisville who has been a Washingtonian since the World War, expects to take an audience on an "automobile tour" of Washington shrines in Virginia tomorrow night.

It will be done by means of a collection of oil paintings of scenes at Wakefield, Washington's birthplace; Ferry Farm and Fredricksburg, Va., known as Washington's "boyhood home," Richmond, St. Peter's Church in Kent County, Williamsburg, etc.

The artist-lecture believes his collection the only one of its kind in existence.

Sponsored by the Interior and PWA travel groups, a special excursion to Chicago over Memorial Day is being planned by the Argonauts. Round trip comes to $24.95 on a private coach attached to the Liberty Limited, leaving Friday, May 26 at 5:10 p. m. Return may be made on any train to midnight, June 4. J. J. Coen, 4007 North Interior Building, is in change of arrangements.

Early risers Sunday may take in a bird walk sponsored by the National Park Service and led by Edwin L. Green, wild life technician. The walk, which begins at 7 a. m., starts at Brookmont, Md., and goes along the towpath of the C. & O. Canal. According to the flossy announcement, "The symphony of the woodland invites you to this early morning visit among many friendly birds." Coo! For information on how to get there, call the National Capital Parks office. Republic 1820, extension 2557.

On the same day, a second tour of the historic Civil Was defenses of Washington will be led by park naturalist Donald Edward McHenry, beginning at 9:30 a. m. and lasting until 5:30 p. m. Private cars should meet on Conduit road at Chain Bridge road. A special bus will leave 1416 F street northwest at 8:45 a. m., fare $1. Bring picnic lunches.

Bob Burns Says—

In these days of high speed efficiency a man has got to keep right on his toes to keep from gettin' mixed up in somethin' he ain't lookin' for. It's just like eatin' a slab of cherry pie. If you eat too fast you're liable to break a tooth on a pit.

I remember one spring we had a church social at the picnic grounds and Uncle Hod fell madly in love with a lady from Arkadelphia. She told him to meet her the next mornin' in front of the church—and when he got there—she led him to the altar. Hod kept balkin' an lookin' back and the lady kept pullin' him by the ear. Then Hod saw the preacher was openin' his book. So Hod turned to the lady an' said, "Sweetheart, don't you think this is carryin' our little flirtation a mite too far?"

Secrets in Love

By Phyllis Moore Gallagher

SYNOPSIS

Peg Patterson is a typist in guardian Otto Nelson's office.

Hewitt Gill, salesman who wants a partnership with Nelson, professes to love Peg.

Anthony Covington, attache home from the Orient.

Mrs. Demarest Polk, a Senator's wife.

Duncan Patterson, United States Army Corps lieutenant, Peg's brother.

Peg, Anthony and Duncan start for an embassy reception. On the way Duncan makes a telephone call, while in the car Anthony almost expresses his love for Peg. Duncan returns very perturbed, but says nothing. While dancing with Anthony at the embassy, Peg sees a man staring at her. He is Count Paul Strayan who approaches them demanding an introduction. While Peg is dancing with the Count she suddenly sees Hewitt enter accompanied by beautiful Thalia Polk, daughter of the Senator. Hewit had told Peg he was to be out of the city on business.

Chapter IX

Presently Anthony came streaking across the ballroom and took her from the arms of a blond gentleman from the Swedish Legation. "Enough of a thing is enough," he whispered. And he was escorting her off the floor and into a little sitting room where a small red-headed girl was obviously waiting for them.

Meeting Joan

"That," said Anthony gruffly, "is my brat of a sister, Peg, Joan. She's supposed to be in school in New York but here she is, all dressed up so she doesn't look a day over 40. Actually, she's almost 18."

Joan's green eyes were flashing. Her hand came up and ran nervously through the luxurious wealth of red curls. "Anthony tells me you're Duncan Patterson's sister," she said, brightly. "That makes things very ducky, indeed, for I shall be Mrs. Duncan Patterson some day. And that will make us sister-in-law or sister-in-laws—or what the hell is it, Tony?"

"Joan!"

Joan dimpled. "Tony shouldn't be in the State Department, Peg. He should be out West, hog-calling. Did you ever hear a yowl that could measure up to that one?" And then she looked at Peg, a bright, green sharp look. "I'm going to like you," she said, impulsively. "But you know that already, don't you. People feel that sort of thing right away, I think."

Peg smiled. "Yes, Joan, I believe they do. I'm going to like you, too." It was true. She was going to like Joan Covington. Anyone could see that she was a gay, reckless, frank little imp and if hair and eyes meant anything at all, she probably had the temper of a wildcat. But beneath it all she was a sweet person. Her mouth was soft and gentle and behind the vivid brightness of her eyes there lay an ability to be hurt, to cry very easily.

Anthony said: "If Peggy likes you, she's crazy." But he didn't mean it. His love for his kid sister stuck out about two inches all over him. He told Peg how Joan had created something of a bewildering riot on Long Island one Sunday by sending to their next-door neighbor an ambulance, a police car, a fire engine, a delivery boy with a quart of mineral oil and a pound of peppermints, a gallon of ice cream, a furniture van, a bakery wagon with a wedding cake and an undertaker.

He told how she had had her driver's license suspended four times. How she had planted a little electrical gadget that flashed STOP and GO on her near-sighted Aunt Bessie's tiara when that fine lady primped for the opening night at Metropolitan. But even as his words were violently abusive, there was a loving thread of amusement there, too.

"Tony's crazy, also," said Joan, thoughtfully. "It's a family tradition with us Covingtons to take us out of our cradles at the tender age of 1 week and drop us on our heads. That's so there'll be an excuse for our actions when we grow up to be great big lads and lassies."

And then she began looking around the room, revolving on a spiked heel, her white satin skirts whirling. "Where's that brother of yours, Peg? I didn't cut school when I heard that Tony and Duncan were coming to this affair just to listen to these sour hep-cats knock off what they call swing. I came down here to get in some real good licks on that lad."

"Incidentally, Peg," said Anthony, grinning, "she hitchhiked. She also crashed this party. She and a young newspaper scoundrel who seconds her in almost every cock-eyed thing she thinks up."

"I've got that pen-twiddler in my power," said Joan. "He was a push-over. But that Army Apollo's a hard-boiled job. He just simply isn't allergic to me, if you know what I mean."

Peg hadn't seen Hewitt coming toward her or Thalia floating over the floor in another man's arms, a dark cloud of velvet and ermine. She didn't know that Hewitt stood beside her unil she heard him speak her name. When she turned and met his dark eyes her knees trembled, her breath went short in her throat. In a sort of dazed agony she presented him to Joan Covington, watched him shake Anthony's hand. She was still trembling as Hewitt's arms went around her and they moved out to the crowded floor.

"How nice, Hewitt. This is really a delightful surprise," she said, softly, smiling a little with a mouth that was holding back a bitter sob. Don't let him see how much you care, Peg. Don't let your defenses down. For this was a game, she decided in her torture, a game that women knew how to play instinctively. They really had no alternative, for any other pattern of conduct would make them conspicuous and ridiculous.

Hewitt said: "Peg, I know what you're thinking. Darling, you mustn't . . ."

For a moment Peg didn't say anything. Her eyes were fastened quietly on his. "Just what am I thinking, Hewitt?"

"You're thinking I lied about Baltimore. I didn't, Peg. I should have gone. But it seemed so much more important to come here. Thalis called me just as I was leaving our apartment. And you know how much I want Senator Polk's account. If I brought that in now, I feel sure Mr. Nelson would come across with that partnership pronto. You must realize that, too, Peg. You've had real influence with him and the Polk account might turn the trick for us. You've got to understand that. Peg, darling . . ."

His arms tightened around her and Peg knew an exquisite relief. She didn't say anything; just clung to him. Giving herself to the magic created by his nearness, the harmonious content of moving with him in rhythm. All the while a satisfied little voice was speaking somewhere in her mind. "Thalis Polk doesn't mean anything to Hewitt." The realization of this, of how she had wronged Hewitt, made happiness sparkle in her eyes, dimple the corners of her mouth. Even Duncan, scowling in the stag line, still obviously waiting for some one who had not come, could not rob her of this recaptured ecstacy.

Life Sweet Again

Hewitt said softly: "Friday night, Peg? Everything all set? Wish it could be sooner, but I've got to be in Baltimore tomorrow, and New York straight from there." His voice . . . soft now, gently intimate . . . gave her a divinely horrible sinking feeling. She said: "Oh, yes, Hewitt—Friday." And forgot completely that she had promised Friday night to Paul Stranyan.

Hewitt whispered: "That's the ticket, sweet. I knew you'd understand." And then he was gone, for Anthony had cut in.

Anthony was saying: "I can see that Duncan's idea of bringing you tonight was entirely wrong. The competition's too stiff. It'll probably turn your head—in just the opposite direction from me."

Then: "Holy smoke, look at Joan! She's spotted Duncan with the stags and there she goes!"

Peg, looking over Anthony's shoulder, saw Hewitt cutting in on Thalia, and winced a little. But that was absurd of her, of course, Thalia was Hewitt's date; she was his duty. Then she moved her gaze to Joan Covington, who was weaving through the dancing couples, a young white sprite with determined green eyes and a small set jaw. Halfway toward Duncan she stopped abruptly, her face paling. Peg, turning a little in Anthony's arms, saw what his sister had seen.

Duncan was no longer standing there in the stag line with a look of watchful suspense on his bronzed face. He was skirting the edge of the ballroom floor, passing Joan without seeing her. His eyes were bright with relief and there was a smile—yet not quite a smile—moving his lips. He was standing at last before a woman—an older blonde woman in gold velvet who made a glamorously beautiful picture framed as she was in the curving white arch of the doorway.

Some one dancing near Peg said, excitedly: "Oh, my dear, there's Mme. Damara. Just came in. No, darling, over there by the door. In gold velvet. She and Dr. Damara are such a charming couple . . ." the voice trailed off.

Clandestine Love

Before Nadeja Damara had come into the ballroom to stand there in that gold velvet with her pale blonde hair brushed smoothly off her forehead, Duncan had known an agony of impatience. "Suppose she doesn't come," he had thought, miserably. "Suppose Emmanuel didn't get off to New York after all." Then he thought, feeling a hot flash of anxiety, "If she doesn't come . . .".

Always it was like this. For six months now he had lived in a heaven and a hell. Routine days of bathing, shaving, his duties at the Munitions Building, the hours when he worked in his bungalow on perfecting a bomb sighting device. For like his illustrious great-uncle, Admiral Thaddeus Winston, he had an inventive mind. And again like Uncle Thad, he gave the best of himself to his country, though he was fully aware that there was a personal fortune in many of his patents which were now being perfected at Wright Field.

A long time ago Uncle Thad had told him: "I could have been a very wealthy man, Duncan. I could have sold my military patents to a munitions plant, to a foreign government . . . maybe the wrong one."

Duncan was, he knew, like Uncle Thad in so many ways. Ideals. Dreams. Visions. But not when it came to women. Uncle Thad had lived and died a bachelor. His work, his duty and science always had been enough: in a way, the dedication of his life to the service had been like a marriage vow, exempting him from love trouble. But long ago Duncan had realized that his own brain, his own heart and his hotly passionate body needed a woman. His woman.

Arlington Dedicates Youth Stadium

Capper and Voorhis Attack Isms in Republic Speeches

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST. Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0509.

A young Democratic liberal congressman and a veteran Republican senatorial stalwart last night joined in an attack on foreign ways of thought at the dedication of the Arlington Stadium of the Boys' Republic and the Girls' Republic at Wilson boulevard and North Stafford street.

Representative Jerry Voorhis (Democrat), of California, stoutly defending the right to advance any kind of idea that may tend to solve America's problems, at the same time denounced "attempts by foreign powers and foreign organizations by underhanded methods to deceive the American people into a loss of constitutional democracy and freedom."

We will listen to a man who really loves his country even though we disagree with him, Voorhis said, but not to the person who does the will of Hitler, Stalin or Mussolini.

"We ask fair play," he concluded, "and we resent any group in the U. S. whose final loyalty is to something or somebody outside of the U. S."

Taking the same keynote, Senator Capper (Republican), of Kansas, pointed to the slogan over the stadium's gateway, "The Youth of Today is the America of Tomorrow," and offered it as a challenge "to meet successfully the very open and hidden attacks by various "isms" which are foreign to our ideals."

Among other speakers were William P. Ames, member of the county board; Mrs. Ruby G. Simpson, State director for the Girl's Republic; T. S. Wilcher, founder; Miss Maude Parker, James R. Needham and Lou Blue.

Arthur C. Stickley, president of the National Advisory Council, presided.

Fairfax Board of Supervisors to Conduct Hearing Tomorrow on Traffic Ordinance

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST, P. O. Box 245, Fairfax, Va. Phone Falls Church 2088-M.

The Fairfax County board of supervisors tomorrow will conduct a public hearing on a proposed county traffic ordinance.

The ordinance, drafted by Commonwealth's Attorney Paul E. Brown, parallels a number of State traffic laws. If adopted by the supervisors, fines in many cases which heretofore have gone to the State, will go into the county treasury if the arrests are made by county officers.

When arrests are made by State officers the fines still will go to the State.

Trio Sentenced In Assault Case

Annapolis, Md., May 15 (AP).—Albert McManus, 35, was sentenced today to ten years for a statutory offense and William Dehn, 27, was sentenced to eight years for committing the same offense against a 29-year-old mother of five children.

The pair was sentenced by Judge Ridgely P. Melvin, who convicted them Friday after declaring northern Anne Arundel County had become the "outlet for Baltimore's criminal sewers."

Arthur Wageley, 19, was fined $200 and given a five-year term in the house of correction, but the latter was suspended. He pleaded guilty to a statutory charge.

The trio was arrested after the woman reported they forced her to accompany them from South Baltimore into Anne Arundel County on Easter night.

Sergt. Furr Dies Of Heart Ailment

Minor Edward Furr, 68, a retired police sergeant was found dead in his home at 3512 Thirty-sixth street northwest, yesterday. He had been under doctor's care for a heart ailment for several years. He had been retired in 1931 when he was assigned to the Seventh Precinct.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Myrtle J. Furr; two sons, Roger T. and Joseph S. Furr, and two daughters, Martha Agnes and Margaret Virginia Furr.

After short services at the home at 10 a. m. tomorrow (Wednesday), the body will be taken to Ebenezer Cemetery, near Upperville, Va., for burial with Masonic rites.

$35,000 Offered in Jefferson Memorial Statue Competition

$1,000 to Be Awarded for Each of Six Best Models; Judges Will Select Winner Without Knowing Names of Sculptors

A $35,000 open competition for a bronze statue representing or symbolizing Thomas Jefferson which will be placed in the Jefferson Memorial now rising on the Tidal Basin was announced yesterday by the Memorial Commission.

The competition, open to every American sculptor over 25 years of age, will be judged by Henri Marceau, secretary of the Fairmont Park Association of Philadelphia, and James Earle Fraser and Heinz Warneke, sculptors.

In the competition's finals, the judges will not know the sculptor of the models they are judging. This departs from the commission's earlier granting of the architectural award for the memorial itself to the late John Russell Pope without competition.

Artists must submit photographs of their work. From there, the jury will narrow the field to six applicants, who will submit actual plaster models one-sixth the size of the final statue. Each of the final contestants will be paid $1,000. The winner will receive an additional $35,000.

The commission recommended a statue about 16½ feet high, or a seated figure 13 feet tall to be placed in the center of the memorial's rotaunda.

University Hospital Will Graduate 48

Charlottesville, May 15 (AP).—Forty-eight nurses will receive diplomas at the University Hospital Nurses' Training School graduation exercises, to be held here May 25. The commencement address will be given by Dr. Wyndham B. Blanton, off Richmond. Invocation will be led by the Rev. L. A. Rowan, of the Charlottesville Catholic Church.

Graduates will be presented by Dr. Harvey E. Jordan, acting dean of the University of Virginia Medical School, and diplomas will be awarded by President John L. Newcomb. University Hospital Alumnae pins will be given to the graduates by Dr. Henry B. Mulholland.
